Lord Jacob Rothschild Dies at 87

Lord Jacob Rothschild, a senior member of one of Europe's most influential banking dynasties, has died at 87 years of age. In a statement released after his death, his family described him as "a superbly accomplished financier, a champion of the arts and culture, a devoted public servant, a passionate supporter of charitable causes in Israel and Jewish culture, a keen environmentalist and much-loved friend, father and grandfather."

The Rothschild family began its rise to prominence in the late 18th century, after Mayer Amschel Rothschild founded the Rothschild banking dynasty in the 1760s. Jacob, a descendant of Mayer, co-founded J. Rothschild Assurance Group in 1991 after starting his career in 1963 at the family's bank, N M Rothschild & Sons.

Former U.K. Prime Minister Tony Blair released a tribute to Rothschild, stating on X, "Jacob was a dear friend and a wonderful human being. I will miss him immensely. He was of course a towering figure in Britain's Jewish community but his impact was global in his support for great causes, including in the arts and the environment, and in his tireless work to advance peace in the Middle East. My deepest condolences to Hannah and all the Rothschild family."
