SCOTUS Hearing Arguments on Trump Ballot Disqualification

The U.S. Supreme Court is hearing former President Donald Trump's appeal of a December 19 decision by the Colorado Supreme Court blocking him from the 2024 Colorado primary ballot. Three of the nine justices on the Supreme Court were appointed by Trump: Neil Gorsuch, Brett Kavanaugh, and Amy Coney Barrett.

Senator Marsha Blackburn (R-Tenn.) spoke outside of the Supreme Court this morning in support of Trump, saying on X, "I went to the Supreme Court this morning to show my support for President Trump. The Left's nearly decade-long witch hunt to take down Trump must end. Let the American people decide our next president."

Senator Tommy Tuberville (R-Ala.) joined Blackburn, saying on X, "This morning, I was proud to take a stand for President Trump and for Democracy outside the Supreme Court. The Left's witch-hunt has gone on long enough. Stop this attack on OUR Democracy, and let the PEOPLE decide in November."
