

Here Comes the Judge, There Goes Order and the Border

Written by Matt O'Brien on November 4, 2025

areas and must not arrest journalists in retaliation for negative coverage. Apart from that, the press may be treated in the exact same manner as the wider American public. And ICE is under no obligation to ignore its statutorily assigned responsibilities, or refrain from defending its agents, because doing so might inconvenience journalists.

In fact, it would not be unreasonable to infer that this lawsuit actually has little to do with First Amendment concerns and more to do with opposition to immigration enforcement of any kind by Left-leaning journalists. The Chicago Headline Club is the local chapter of the Society for Professional Journalists, the progressive press union that in 2011 passed a resolution banning the use of the term “illegal alien” by its members.

Therefore, it seems strange that Judge Ellis would grant a restraining order. But issue an order she did, and the nature of that injunction is beyond distressing. Rather than reading like a court order, it more closely resembles a set of operational instructions issued by an ICE supervisor. And it cites virtually no legal bases for its prescriptions, which is a significant problem, because any action taken by a federal judge in the United States must be based on the Constitution of the United States; a federal statute; an administrative agency regulation; or a federal precedent. Simply put, none of those sources of authority permit a federal judge to direct the street-level operations of an executive branch agency. And even under the broadest interpretation of relevant federal rules and regulations, a district court judge has no authority to order law enforcement personnel to use body cameras. Ultimately, Judge Ellis’ order is nothing but a shameless example of a federal judge presuming to make on-the-street tactical decisions for a law enforcement agency.

Moreover, rather than being based on any legitimate interpretation of the law, her orders in this case seem to be motivated by her personal views on border security and immigration enforcement. According to her Wikipedia Bio, Judge Ellis was appointed by the Obama Administration, which vocally advocated for amnesty, loose borders and increased immigration. In addition, Judge Ellis is a naturalized immigrant from Canada and — like many naturalized U.S. citizens — she appears unwilling to draw a clear line between lawful migrants and illegal aliens.

Drifting toward juristocracy is highly problematic. In a democratic republic like the United States, citizens rely on their elected representatives — in the form of the President and Congress — to make policy decisions that reflect the general will of the American people. When unelected judges overturn those decisions without a legitimate legal basis, the democratic process is completely undermined, and the will of the people is thwarted. That problem is compounded when a black-robed sage hobbles the forces of law and order while giving free rein to those who would sow chaos.

Dr. Matt O’Brien is the deputy executive director at the Federation for American Immigration Reform (FAIR). Matt has 30 years of experience in immigration law and policy. Immediately prior to joining FAIR, he was the Assistant Chief Immigration Judge, overseeing the U.S. Immigration Court at Annandale, Va.

Subscribe to the New American

Get exclusive digital access to the most informative, non-partisan truthful news source for patriotic Americans!

Discover a refreshing blend of time-honored values, principles and insightful perspectives within the pages of "The New American" magazine. Delve into a world where tradition is the foundation, and exploration knows no bounds.

From politics and finance to foreign affairs, environment, culture, and technology, we bring you an unparalleled array of topics that matter most.

Subscribe

What's Included?

- 24 Issues Per Year
- Optional Print Edition
- Digital Edition Access
- Exclusive Subscriber Content
- Audio provided for all articles
- Unlimited access to past issues
- Coming Soon! Ad FREE
- 60-Day money back guarantee!
- Cancel anytime.