

Written by Wallis W. Wood on May 7, 2012

Virginia Governor lamented how the Obama administration pulled the rug out of from under plans to develop his state's offshore oil and gas resources. He explained, "In 2010, Virginia was poised to become the first state on the East Coast permitted to produce oil and natural gas offshore."

But the plans were nixed by Washington "with little explanation and even less regard for the strong bipartisan and public support for the offshore initiative." Three months later, the administration added insult to injury when it announced plans to subsidize wind-power development in Virginia's waters.

And the same thing is happening from the Gulf Coast to Alaska. Profit-making (and tax-paying) private companies that want to develop our oil and gas resources are told "no way, Jose." One project in Alaska that McDonnell cites could have created 55,000 new jobs annually — not to mention $145 billion in new payroll and $193 billion in additional government revenue. In case after case, it was a government bureaucrat — not the marketplace — that put the kibosh on the project.

And don't get me started about the Keystone XL pipeline. Thanks to the administration's intransigence, thousands of jobs — and billions of barrels of oil — that could have been flowing from Canada to Texas and Oklahoma may now be going to China.

By the way, it's not just federal regulators who can promulgate some crazy rules. So can state and local governments, as many homeowners can testify. Just ask Joseph Pomares, who was recently cited for having "standing water" in a birdbath he added to a rental home he owns in Astoria, N.Y. A new regulation to the health code there makes landlords responsible for any infractions found on their property that could lead to the "breeding or harborage" of mosquitoes. It seems regulators there take their responsibilities to prevent West Nile virus very seriously. The citation he received advised Pomares that he was in violation of Article 151 of the city's health code and could face a $2,000 fine if the situation was not remedied at once.

No doubt I could fill 100 more pages with similar injustices and outrages across this country. I was going to say that it was no doubt impossible to estimate the cost of complying with all the rules and regulations that have been inflicted on us by a Big Nanny government run amuck. But if I said that, I'd be wrong. It turns out that the Competitive Enterprise Institute, a pro-free market think tank in Washington, has undertaken precisely such a study. And CEI says the total cost to our economy of government regulation amounts to a staggering $1.75 trillion a year.

To help put that price tag in perspective, CEI reports "Regulatory costs exceed all 2008 corporate pretax profits of $1.463 trillion." How many jobs has it cost us? It's impossible to know for certain, but the number is likely in the millions.

Administration officials have pointed with pride to the latest unemployment figure, which allegedly has fallen to 8.2 percent. This is based on claims that 120,000 new jobs were added to the economy in March. But buried deep in the report is the news that far more Americans who got new jobs dropped out of the labor force that month. The "no longer looking for work" numbers swelled by 164,000.

Just think about it: If every unemployed person stopped looking for work, our unemployment rate would be 0. That's the sort of "recovery" this administration is giving us.

In the Declaration of Independence, Thomas Jefferson said that King George had "erected a Multitude of New Offices, and sent hither swarms of Officers to harass our people, and eat out their substance."

Frankly, compared to what this Administration has done to us, our rebellious forefathers had it easy. Don't you agree?

Written by Wallis W. Wood on May 7, 2012

Until next time, keep some powder dry.

Chip Wood was the first news editor of The Review of the News and also wrote for American Opinion, our two predecessor publications. He is now the geopolitical editor of Personal Liberty Digest, where his Straight Talk column appears weekly. This article first appeared in PersonalLiberty.com and has been reprinted with permission.*

Subscribe to the New American

Get exclusive digital access to the most informative, non-partisan truthful news source for patriotic Americans!

Discover a refreshing blend of time-honored values, principles and insightful perspectives within the pages of "The New American" magazine. Delve into a world where tradition is the foundation, and exploration knows no bounds.

From politics and finance to foreign affairs, environment, culture, and technology, we bring you an unparalleled array of topics that matter most.

What's Included?

- 24 Issues Per Year
- Optional Print Edition
- Digital Edition Access
- Exclusive Subscriber Content
- Audio provided for all articles
- Unlimited access to past issues
- Coming Soon! Ad FREE
- 60-Day money back guarantee!
- Cancel anytime.

Subscribe