

Why the Globalists Don't Want You to Leave Your Kids an Inheritance

“A good man leaveth an inheritance to his children’s children: And the wealth of the sinner is laid up for the just.”

It is important to understand that many of the prevailing practices and beliefs in our society, even ones that are commonly hailed as “conservative,” were planted by the globalist oligarchs in order to suppress opposition to their rule.

One of the popular tendencies that the establishment secretly wants us to cling to is the notion that a man should do as little as possible to help his progeny and instead accumulate wealth merely to spend his last years in fun and diversion — rewarding himself for a lifetime of hard work.

Luis Miguel

This is a belief that has become all too common: The feeling that once one’s children are grown, one does not owe them anything and they should completely build their own fortune.

Meanwhile, the man who follows this notion counts the days to his retirement. When he finally hits that magical age, he gleefully steps away from all professional responsibilities and cashes out — selling the family business or his stock or digging into a fat retirement account to live like a rock star in his final days. Sports cars. Boats. Traveling all over the world. Doing everything to ensure all the money is spent before he dies — after all, you can’t take it with you, so you might as well live it up while it lasts.

For such individuals, it seems blasphemous to even suggest that they make it a priority to leave a significant inheritance to their children. “Why should I give my kids a handout? Let them make their own way.”

But that mentality is not the Lord’s way, as seen in the verse from Proverbs at the beginning of this article. Leaving your children an inheritance is part of the larger duty of giving them a future better than the life you yourself enjoyed.

Part of the problem is the belief that helping one’s children is depriving them of the opportunity to build something for themselves. But that is a very narrow-minded view that sees the world in a limited way. Obviously, a man should rear his children to be personally driven and proactive, so that they could build a fortune even without any assistance.

But there is no ceiling on human achievement; there is always space for higher and higher heights depending on what foundations one is beginning from. A man who went from abject poverty to millionaire could perhaps have become a billionaire if he had begun with greater resources at his disposal — just as a young man can theoretically become a world-famous surgeon after growing up in a dangerous slum in India and going to bed hungry every night, but has a much better chance of achieving it growing up in a wealthy neighborhood in America and attending the best schools.

Written by Luis Miguel on May 17, 2023

In a highly competitive world, shouldn't a man want his children to have every possible advantage he can give them?

Society at large is based on the principle of leaving a base that your posterity can use as a springboard, not making them start from zero. Imagine if society functioned the way many view their relationship with their children: "Sorry, kids, you're not allowed to have automobiles or airplanes or computers or electricity or even fire. You have to create it all for yourselves from scratch. No handouts."

The globalists understand the literal power that comes with giving that advantage to your descendants. It's why after decades and even centuries, dynasties like the Rockefellers and the Rothschilds continue to have such control over global affairs. And with each generation, that control grows, because every generation accumulates all it can, and then hands it over to the subsequent generation as a foundation upon which to build.

If more patriotic, Christian families organized their affairs the way these globalist dynasties do, we would collectively have more power to combat the cabal. Many conservatives say Trump is better positioned to fight the Deep State because he is an independently wealthy billionaire. But remember that Trump got to where he is because of the foundation laid by his developer father, Fred Trump, who started the Trump Organization and left Donald a hefty inheritance of over $400 million.

If more patriot fathers did as Fred Trump did, we would have more Donald Trumps in this country, people who not only talk about the issues we face, but have the means to do something about them. Or more George Washingtons and Thomas Jeffersons for that matter — men who came from wealthy planter families. As with Trump, these men's inherited financial affluence afforded them the autonomy to participate in politics and lead a nation to independence.

The Left wants to prevent men like Washington and Jefferson from arising. It's why they support the death tax. They don't want you passing your hard-earned wealth on to your children.

Of course, it's not all about money either. A real man's inheritance also consists of the wisdom, morality, and example he passes on to his descendants.

And joining the fight to save the nation is also part of a man's inheritance. For what kind of man can sit comfortably in retirement having the time of his life knowing the country his children and grandchildren will grow up in will be one marked by tyranny and oppression?

Subscribe to the New American

Get exclusive digital access to the most informative, non-partisan truthful news source for patriotic Americans!

Discover a refreshing blend of time-honored values, principles and insightful perspectives within the pages of "The New American" magazine. Delve into a world where tradition is the foundation, and exploration knows no bounds.

From politics and finance to foreign affairs, environment, culture, and technology, we bring you an unparalleled array of topics that matter most.

Subscribe

What's Included?

- 24 Issues Per Year
- Optional Print Edition
- Digital Edition Access
- Exclusive Subscriber Content
- Audio provided for all articles
- Unlimited access to past issues
- Coming Soon! Ad FREE
- 60-Day money back guarantee!
- Cancel anytime.