QuickQuotes

(Whitehouse.gov)

“I used to think when I was a senator, there was always congestion on the highways. There’s no congestion anymore. None. We got on the highway; there’s no congestion. And so — the way they get me to stop talking, they’ll say: ‘We just shut down all the roads. Mr. President, you’re gonna lose all the votes if you don’t get in.’ But anyway...”

Even major media are criticizing President Joe Biden’s confusing references made while speaking to American military families at the White House on July 4. During further rambling, he referred to former president and campaign rival Donald Trump as “one of our colleagues.”

“The whole Chevron deference doctrine ... not only allows Congress to punt to agencies to decide questions of law, stripping them away from the courts ... it even allows those delegations to happen when Congress says nothing — when it’s silent. They wanted to create this fourth branch of government with a group of experts who would ... rule over the American people on the theory that they have expertise that ordinary people didn’t have. And the Supreme Court wiped that away today, 6-3.”

Jeff Clark, director of litigation for the Center for Renewing America, appeared on Real America’s Voice discussing the June 28 SCOTUS ruling in Loper Bright Enterprises et al. v. Raimondo, Secretary of Commerce, et al., which drastically curtailed federal agencies’ power.

“President Trump looked at the Taliban leader and said this: ‘I want to leave Afghanistan, but it’s going to be a conditions-based withdrawal.... If you harm a hair on a single American, I’m going to kill you.’ [Trump] reached in his pocket, pulled out a satellite photo of the leader of the Taliban’s home, and handed it to him, got up, and walked out the room.”

“I think unfortunately a lot of the district planning, in particular, have been derailed by 15-minute-cities conspiracy theories — you know, World Economic Forums, etc. At the end of the day, this is about land use.”

Speaking to media after a city council meeting, Ward Karhio Councillor Keren Tang of Edmonton, Alberta, contradicted herself in one breath, both refuting so-called conspiracy theories and admitting their veracity. The city has district zoning plans to restrict residents from regular travel outside a 15-minute walk or ride on public transit.

Rob Schneider (AP Images)

“Be careful of Political parties that warn of a threat to Democracy while they themselves arrest their political opponents, work with Tech companies to censor those that disagree with them, allow men in women’s sports & bathrooms, encourage child mutilation surgeries, fire Federal workers & nurses for not getting experimental gene therapies, threaten to expand the Supreme Court and eliminate the Electoral College, cause rampant inflation ... allow 11 million people to illegally cross the border, and push the entire World close to World War III.”

Actor and comedian Rob Schneider posted this message on X in July.
