Americans Must End Election Fraud, or the Country Is Lost

As universal mail-in voting becomes ubiquitous, the integrity of free and fair elections becomes more and more severely compromised. Mail-in ballots are but one seed of the “poisonous fruit of election fraud,” to borrow from author and elections scholar Peter Navarro, corrupting our political system.

Navarro’s illuminating three-part Navarro Report, documenting the widespread irregularities of the 2020 presidential election, cites a study in Pennsylvania of voter rolls matching public obituaries that suggests more than “8,000 confirmed dead voters successfully cast mail-in ballots.”

The dead cast ballots by the thousands in Georgia as well. Argues Navarro, “the estimated number of alleged deceased individuals casting votes [in Georgia] almost exactly equals the Biden victory margin [roughly 12,000 votes].”

Through mail-only elections, this country runs the very tangible risk of those in power gaining more power or staying in power, as the will of the people is thwarted through highly sophisticated means of manipulating the vote to favor a Democratic candidate over a Republican.

Currently six states have signed into law the nefarious practice of universal mail-in ballots. Most recently joining Washington, Oregon, Utah, Hawaii, and Colorado is the state of California, where Governor Gavin Newsom signed the law “because we believe in making voting EASIER and for every voice to be heard.”

Expect more Democratic states to expand this list, as they have seen how effectively elections can be won using this process.

In November 2020, taking full advantage of the hysteria stemming from the uber-hyped COVID crisis, the Democratic machine unleashed a brilliant strategy, a part of which was mail-in voting, that rigged effectively the 2020 presidential race for Joe Biden, the Georgia Senate race for Raphael Warnock and Jon Ossoff, and most recently the recall election of California’s Gruesome Newsom.

Election laws in most if not all 50 states were modified in response to the coronavirus, allowing, among other things, for the suspension of restrictions on mail-in and absentee ballot procedures (i.e., waiving the requirement of a witness to sign an absentee ballot). Changes in key battleground states, such as Wisconsin, Michigan, and Iowa, included ballots sent to every registered voter (and then some) even if the voter did not request one. Modified laws in Pennsylvania included the acceptance of mail-in ballots up to four days beyond November 3.

Such safeguards were arguably set up to assuage the concern of those who were convinced by the mainstream media to be afraid to go to polling centers for fear of catching COVID. However, by November, Americans had lived with COVID for nearly a year, and many understood it to be a highly survivable and treatable virus, especially for the healthy and non-immunocompromised.

Yet for the Democrats, with Big Tech and Big Business conspiring in the shadows, the golden goose of mail-in voting proved to return huge dividends. Post-election reviews in Arizona's Maricopa and Pima counties show that mail-in ballots undoubtedly opened the door for ballot-stuffing on a level never before witnessed in the history of U.S. elections. Some precincts in these counties saw an unprecedented 100-percent voter turnout, as well as a 97-percent return rate on mail-in ballots.

The unprecedented rates at which mail-in ballots poured in on election night, November 3, 2020, when polling centers shut down, just as Donald Trump was vastly outperforming Joe Biden, are staggering. The mail-in ballots spiked to statistically impossible numbers, nudging Biden toward that thin margin of victory that would declare him the undisputed winner by the legacy media, the far-left, and even Fox News.

Such shocking events unfolded in key battleground states, where legislators are now fed up and fighting for reform.

On October 15, Arizona State Senator Wendy Rogers, a Republican, announced that as many as 138 legislators from 31 states had signed a "Letter from State Legislators to the American People in Reference to the 2020 Election," calling for full forensic election audits in all 50 states, decertification where appropriate, and a possible special session of the U.S. House of Representatives to vote "to decide the rightful winner of the election in accordance with the constitutional process of choosing electors."

As Rogers states, "If we do not have accurate and fair elections, we do not have a country."

Even in Democratic strongholds, grassroots election-integrity groups are rising to stop election fraud. To smash the reign of tyrannical governors such as Washington's Jay Inslee and California's Newsom, who continue their overreach and relentless quest for power, one of the answers is to obliterate mail-in voting laws altogether.
