Brexit Betrayal & the EU Liars Club

For the past year-and-a-half, British Prime Minister Theresa May has been running out the clock on Brexit. She has repeatedly scurried back and forth across the English Channel for meetings with European Commission President Jean-Claude Juncker, European Council President Donald Tusk, German Chancellor Angela Merkel, and French President Emmanuel Macron — all in the interest, supposedly, of working out a favorable deal for Britain’s exit from the European Union.

When a majority (17.4 million) of British citizens voted to leave the EU in the historic Brexit referendum in June of 2016, the globalist grandees everywhere were stunned beyond belief. This was the biggest setback to the EU since its founding (as the European Economic Community, or Common Market) in 1957. It was also a huge defeat for the entire globalist agenda, since the EU has served as their model of regional subversion of national sovereignty. Not only the globalists in charge of the U.K.’s Conservative, Labour, SNP, and Liberal Democrat parties, but one-worlders the world over in business, finance, academia, think tanks, entertainment, and the media arose en masse to chide, scold, and warn the recalcitrant British voters. In the run-up to the vote, billionaires George Soros, Jacob Rothschild, Bill Gates, Richard Branson, Michael Bloomberg, Li Ka-shing, and other avatars of the Bilderberg/Davos set lent their voices to Project Fear, the anti-Brexit propaganda campaign of then-Prime Minister David Cameron, the Bank of England, and the ruling elites. A vote for Brexit was a vote for Armageddon, they warned. Markets would crash, the British pound would fall, governments would collapse, chaos would ensue. None of that happened, of course.

Cameron was forced to resign as a result of his defeat over Brexit. Theresa May was his pro-EU/anti-Brexit ally, but on assuming the prime minister post, she assured one and all that she was completely committed to honoring the will of the voters, repeatedly saying, “Leave means leave,” and “Brexit means Brexit.” However, she also said that she would fight for the views of the “remainers” in her negotiations with the EU.

When the text of her Brexit “deal” with the EU was finally revealed, it was quickly apparent that it really wasn’t a Brexit at all, and “leave” in May’s lexicon actually means “remain,” but in an even more disadvantageous position for Britain than prior to the Brexit vote. Realizing she faced a full revolt and utter defeat on her misbegotten agreement in Parliament, May canceled the vote — scheduled for December 11 — at the last minute. She then survived a brutal no-confidence vote, while she continued her pleadings with her EU masters to make concessions that would allow her to placate Brexiteers while still keeping the U.K. inside the EU.

As we reported after the Brexit victory back in 2016, many anti-Brexit pundits and political strategists had advised at the time that the best way to sabotage the Brexit would be to delay it, to draw out negotiations as long as possible and muddy the waters with many side issues. Meanwhile the powers that be would continue with Project Fear II, projecting dire financial scenarios and warning that a “hard exit” or “crashing out” from the EU would be disastrous. They are pushing “buyer’s remorse” and Brexit fatigue, in the hopes of getting a second Brexit referendum. This is pure EU: Praise democracy, until the voters vote contrary to the EU masters’ wishes. Then it’s time for a re-vote, and another re-vote, if necessary, until the voters finally vote the way the masters demand. That is what we saw with the EU Constitution vote, of which Juncker infamously remarked, “If it’s a Yes, we will say ‘on we go,’ and if it’s a No we will say ‘we continue.’”

This is all about national sovereignty. Many of the Brexit voters and Brexiteers in Parliament realize this. It is about whether British citizens will be ruled by British law or by EU taskmasters in Brussels. At the entrance to the European Parliament in Brussels, there is a plaque with this telling inscription: “National sovereignty is the root cause of the most crying evils of our times.... The only final remedy for this evil is the federal union of the peoples.” It is a quote by Lord Lothian, Philip Kerr, one of the founders of the Royal Institute of International Affairs (Chatham House), the sister organization of the world-government-promoting Council on Foreign Relations here in the United States. Juncker, Tusk, and other members of the EU liars club have made similar statements.

In a moment of candor, Juncker remarked of the EU Lisbon Treaty: “Of course there will be transfers of sovereignty. But would I be intelligent to draw the attention of public opinion to this fact?” He also said, “When it becomes serious, you have to lie.” The Brexit is serious business, so more lies and deception should be expected.
