Deep State's Embedded Reds

It was a jaw-dropping double admission by one of the most powerful men in the world, but one that was mostly ignored by the usual culprits in the major media. During a panel discussion at the Congressional Black Caucus Foundation's annual conference in 2016, CIA Director John Brennan proudly confessed that in 1976 he had voted for Gus Hall, chairman of the Communist Party (CPUSA), to be president of the United States. He followed that up by confessing that he lied (by way of evasion) about his communist ties when he took his polygraph test while applying for a job with the CIA. Historical note: Gus Hall and the CPUSA received 58,709 votes in 1976, a mere 0.07 percent of the national total.

Habitual liar: Before joining the CIA and rising to be its director, John Brennan voted for Communist Party chief Gus Hall, a Stalinist, to be president of the United States — then later lied about it, and still later boasted about lying about it. He also repeatedly committed perjury, an imprisonable offense.

Gus Hall was well known as a hardline Stalinist and universally recognized as the paid stooge of and propagandist for Soviet Russia. But Brennan, our future CIA chief, was one of the less than one tenth of one percent of U.S. voters who saw “the need for change” (as he said), and so pulled the lever for Comrade Hall. And then lied about it. Lying and deception are expected of communists; it's part of the job description. It seems to be habitual with Brennan, who has been caught flat-out lying multiple times, including under oath (which is perjury, a felony), including with regard to illegally bugging the U.S. Senate; denying that U.S. drone attacks had killed civilians; and denying knowledge that the anti-Trump Steele Dossier (which we now know was Russian disinformation) was commissioned and paid for by the Hillary Clinton presidential campaign.

One of Brennan's biggest deceptions was the gambit he pulled off with Director of National Intelligence James Clapper and FBI Director James Comey (who seem to be as accomplished at lying/perjury as Brennan) known as the January 6, 2017 Intelligence Community Assessment (ICA) on Russian Interference in the 2016 elections. You know the story, as it was repeated endlessly in the media: Experts from all 17 agencies of the intelligence community had concluded that Russian President Vladimir Putin had ordered an election-influence campaign to help Donald Trump and hurt Hillary Clinton. That was the sensational claim, but no substantiating evidence was provided because it was a lie — on multiple levels. Clapper later admitted in Senate hearings that the ICA was rush-ordered by President Obama, violated ICA protocols, did not allow dissenting views, and involved only a small group of “hand-picked” (his words) analysts from the CIA, FBI, and NSA, not all 17 agencies of the intelligence community. But it was used over and over again by the Democrats and the media to justify the years-long “Russia, Russia, Russia” witch hunts that hobbled the Trump administration.

Like Brennan, James Comey admits to being “left of center” while in college, but said that by 1984, “I'd moved from Communist to whatever I am now. I'm not even sure how to characterize myself politically.”

Donovan and Dulles Brothers

Over the past century, plenty of communist activists, even high-level Soviet agents and CPUSA leaders, have come to their senses, converted, repented, and become anti-communist patriots: Benjamin Gitlow, Whittaker Chambers, Elizabeth Bentley, Nathaniel Weyl, Hede Massing, Louis Budenz, Hamish Fraser, Bella Dodd, Paul Crouch, Manning Johnson, and Eugene Genovese, to name a few.

But what did Brennan and Comey become after their supposed conversions? Important question, particularly since they were critical players in the coup attempt against Donald Trump, using fake “evidence” from Russian agents to “prove” that Trump, not Clinton, was Putin’s preferred candidate. By trying to overthrow the constitutionally elected government of the United States, they certainly violated their oath of office and engaged in treasonous activity.

It will come as a shock to many Americans to learn that the CIA, which we have been taught to believe was our intelligence bulwark against communism during the Cold War, has been heavily penetrated by communist agents from its inception. “Wild Bill Donovan’s Office of Strategic Services, the forerunner of the CIA,” writes historian Thomas Fleming in The New Dealers’ War (2001), “had so many informers in its ranks, it was almost an arm of the NKVD,” the precursor of the Soviet KGB. In fact, General William “Wild Bill” Donovan’s personal assistant, Duncan Chaplin Lee, was an NKVD agent and a member of the notorious Victor Perlo spy group. Among the identified Soviet agents at the Office of Strategic Services (OSS) were Donald Wheeler, Maurice Halperin, Carl Aldo Marzani, Milton Wolff, George Wuchinich, Henry Brodie, Irving Fajans, David Martin Flax, Joseph Zack Kornfeder, Irving Goff, Joseph Arthur Yager, Vincent Lossowski, and many more.

Donovan’s affinity for communists was astonishing. He went so far as to ask Eugene Dennis, then number-two man (and later, number one) in the CPUSA — as well as one of the top Soviet NKVD agents in America — to help him recruit communist agents from the United States and Europe for the OSS. He did the same with Milton Wolff, the CPUSA/NKVD agent who had fought for the communists in Spain.

Moreover, he promoted these communists within the OSS and helped place them in the State Department and other federal departments. Donovan even flew to Moscow and offered to set up an office for the mass-murdering NKVD in Washington, D.C., a scheme that was only averted due to ferocious opposition from the FBI's J. Edgar Hoover.

Finally, as reported by Harvey Klehr, John Earl Haynes, and Fridrikh Firsov in The Secret World of American Communism, when members of Congress became aware of, and alarmed by, the extent of this subversion, Donovan repeatedly and brazenly lied about it during sworn testimony at congressional hearings, a portent of the recurring deception that would continue up to our present time. Donovan was an archetype of the hundreds of pro-communist, New Deal globalists who populated the pre-war, World War II, and post-war periods of the Roosevelt and Truman administrations. Like most of those globalists, he was a member of the Council on Foreign Relations (CFR), the brain trust that serves as the nerve center of what is now referred to as the Deep State. After the OSS was dissolved following World War II, he helped found the CIA, which invariably has been run by a CFR member (see list here).

Particularly notable is Allen Dulles (OSS and CFR), the CIA's longest-serving director (1953-1961) and brother of Secretary of State John Foster Dulles, a co-founder of the CFR. The Dulles brothers, while perennially posing as resolute anti-communists, carried on Donovan's legacy of aiding and promoting communists while sabotaging anti-communists at home and betraying our anti-communist allies abroad. A trustee of the Rockefeller Foundation and chairman of the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace, John Foster Dulles appointed one of the most notorious American traitors to serve as president of the endowment: Soviet agent Alger Hiss.
