“Get Trump” — Use Russia, Sex, Obstruction, Whatever

For more than a year, Hillary Clinton’s surrogates in the establishment media chorus have been shrilly bleating the “Trump-Russia collusion” refrain. We have multiple, ongoing investigations of this alleged Trump-Putin conspiracy — by the FBI, by Special Counsel Robert Mueller, by the House of Representatives, by the Senate, and, of course, by the press. How much evidence have these “investigations” produced thus far to substantiate these serious charges? Virtually zero, although they have yielded evidence of serious wrongdoing by Hillary Clinton, the Democratic National Committee, and the Obama administration against Donald Trump and his campaign.

However, having invested so much time, effort, money, and propaganda into the Trump smear scheme, the anti-Trump forces are not about to let up. Nevertheless, the Deep State globalists running the “Get Trump” operation have known all along that the Russia collusion charges are standing on wobbly legs (if not thin air) and will need lots of help to take down the president. Thus, we have been assaulted day after day with a new fire-for-effect scandal du jour, fomented by the transparently hostile media, charging President Trump with racism, sexism, misogyny, xenophobia, narcissism, authoritarianism, Hitlerian tendencies, mental instability, environmental destruction, etc. Each new smear cycle is calculated to put the new administration off balance and divert public attention from the failing Trump-Russia narrative — until the scandal du jour fails also, and the chorus reverts to “Russia, Russia, Russia.”

The globalist Big Media cartel knows it has a real dilemma with this. On January 21, CNN, the lead falsetto voice in the clangorous, clamorous “Get Trump” choir, got a double smack down — from two of its own choir members. CNN reporter Maeve Reston commented on the fact that regular folks outside of the Beltway and the media bubble aren’t all in a lather over Trump-Russia, as are the screeching heads in medialand. According to Reston, “Out in these districts when you talk to people about Russia, and that’s all we talk about at CNN basically, they say they don’t care.” Yes, “that’s all we talk about at CNN” — and at the New York Times, Washington Post, Newsweek, etc.

On the same day, reporter/commentator Jeff Greenfield (a famed veteran of CBS, ABC, CNN, and PBS) chided his fellow CNN panelists over the network’s obsession with Trump-Russia, and its echo-chamber effect of simply reinforcing the biases of its core anti-Trump audience. “When I watch CNN sometimes,” he said, “you know, I think, I expect the indictment on Donald Trump to be imminent,” because of the network’s non-stop focus on the issue.

Besides these telling admissions, there is the stunning revelation of CNN producer John Bonifield, who was caught in an undercover video sting by Project Veritas admitting that the cable network's Trump-Russia spin is pure manure. "I mean, it's mostly bull* right now. Like, we don't have any big giant proof," he told Project Veritas.

"And so," Bonifield admitted to the hidden camera, "I think the president is probably right to say, like, look, you are witch hunting me." Hmm. Quite a different story from what we hear and see daily from CNN and its media brethren, is it not?

After milking each "scandal" through as many news cycles as their dwindling audiences will tolerate, the controlled media herd rushes back to their Trump-Russia "story," as if to prove the biblical observation that the dog returns to his vomit and the pig returns to her mire.

The current vomitous mire in which the "mainstream" media herd has been wallowing for weeks is the "Stormy Daniels scandal." Daniels, a former porn queen, who obviously is relishing the media spotlight, can thank the Never-Trump Fourth Estaters for her newfound stardom. But like "Russiagate," the "Stormygate" scandal has fallen apart. In what was supposed to have been a strategic coup aimed at embarrassing President Trump, Daniels appeared on Jimmy Kimmel Live the same night that the president delivered his State of the Union address. However, Daniels had already recanted and had issued a signed, notarized statement admitting that she had never had an affair with Donald Trump. In other words, she had lied, and the anti-Trump media had voraciously lapped up her defamatory allegations.

The newest "sex scandal" that has the establishment commentariat in a tizzy concerns allegations of spousal abuse by Trump's former White House Secretary Rob Porter. Porter has proclaimed his innocence, but resigned to spare the administration the lynch-mob frenzy whipped up by "journalists" who have already all but declared him guilty. Now, the media mob has fixed its sights on White House Chief of Staff General John Kelly, who, they allege, covered up the Porter "scandal." The aim is to cripple President Trump by forcing the resignation of General Kelly, his current right-hand man. But the fake "Trump-Russia collusion" witch-hunt is still simmering on the back burner.
