A Timely Story

Happily skipping through the Black Forest, I one day came upon the library of a tiny secluded town. Checking its bulletin board, I saw an obituary posted, old and faded. It totally floored me! How could such important news not be better known? I'll offer you the posting in English translation. Better read it sitting down lest your legs suddenly go numb!

"Little Red Riding Hood tried her best not to cross the path of the Big Bad Wolf. The 'conflict' between her and the Wolf was well known — him wanting to eat her and her trying not to become his lunch!

"A group of concerned do-gooders formed a Peace Committee for negotiating a settlement. The task was difficult. The Wolf agreed, engaging in some preliminary small talk. Red Riding Hood adamantly refused.

"One fair morning the Committee cornered her — because she had by mistake left the entrance door unbolted — and brought her kicking and screaming to the negotiating table. Where, by the way, everything was in readiness thanks to careful planning.

"The Committee chairman banged his gavel, then opened his mouth to read the rules along with appropriate introductory statements when, lo and behold, with lightning speed the Wolf leapt clear across the negotiating table, grabbed poor Red Riding Hood and disappeared into a nearby forest!

"The following morning, the Committee received a telegram stating, 'I hate long, boring sessions. Better shorten them next time or I'll get mad. Bring food as usual. The Wolf.'

"The Peace Committee felt compelled to issue a white paper about the calamity, saying, 'It's better trying and failing than not trying at all. Responsibility for the breakdown of negotiations rests with the opponents. We regret a disappearance and likely demise of beloved citizen Miss Riding Hood. We must continue to treasure her memory. On the other hand, we have increased our respect for wolves. No way can they be called boors — sending telegrams and such. A modern wolf appears open, direct, and decisive. In a world of declining values and crumbling morals, the Committee find the Wolf unique and efficient.' Signed the Peace-at-any-price Committee."

Many Thanks

Thank you for your online article from August 27, 2021, "COVID Vaccine Mandates: If I Don't Want the Jab, What Are My Options?" In this article you point your readers toward the Liberty Counsel for legal support in fighting vaccine mandates. My wife had submitted and been accepted for a religious exemption from the vaccine mandate being issued by her company. With the new mandate issued by the White House in August, her company rescinded her exemption on August 31, and gave her 30 days to comply with the vaccine mandate.

After reading your article in early September we contacted Liberty Counsel and provided them with all the details and documentation of her case. Liberty Counsel wasted no time in drafting a legal challenge to the vaccine mandate and the refusal to provide for religious exemption. Upon receiving the legal challenge, my wife's company immediately re-approved her religious exemption and stopped proceeding to terminate her employment!

Thank you The New American for carrying this article, and to Liberty Counsel for their swift and decisive response. Americans, we need to stand together, be courageous, and fight against this tyranny! God Bless America!
