Quick Quotes

AOC Angered After Not Being Invited to Campaign for Democrats Who Lost in Virginia

Alexandria Ocasio-Cortez

flickr/nrkbeta

“Not a single person asked me to send an e-mail, not even to my own list. And then they turn around and say it’s the fault of me and my followers who caused their defeats. I think it was communicated quite expressly that we were unwelcome to pitch in.”

New York Congresswoman Alexandria Ocasio-Cortez believes she could have helped Virginia Democrats who lost races for governor, lieutenant governor, attorney general, and numerous seats in the House of Delegates. But the Democratic leaders in Virginia obviously felt that her presence and her strident socialism would have harmed their candidates’ chances of victory even more.

NYC Will Allow Non-citizens to Vote in Municipal Elections, Protests Arise

“Someone who has lived here for 30 days will have a say in how we raise our taxes, our debt, and our long-term pension liabilities. These are things people who are temporary residents should not have a say in.”

The new law, which will not apply to statewide or congressional elections, has opponents such as New York City Council Member Joseph Borelli. Others who don’t approve of the plan worry that the privilege to vote in municipal elections will be followed by extending voting rights to other categories of voting.

Secretary of Energy Caught Not Knowing How Much Oil U.S.

Burns Every Day

Jennifer Granholm

U.S. Department of Energy

“I don’t have that number in front of me. Sorry.”

Biden’s choice to run the Department of Energy, former Michigan Governor Jennifer Granholm, boasted that President Biden’s release of 50 million barrels from strategic reserves was a significant response to rising gasoline prices. When told that the extra oil could be consumed in fewer than three days, she responded with a mere nod of her head and dead silence.

Escalating Inflation Worries Conservative Columnist

“On Monday, November 15th, Biden signed the $1.2 trillion infrastructure bill. He and congressional Democrats are pushing to spend nearly $2 trillion more on the so-called Build Back Better plan. Some in the media are now contending that rising inflation is something to celebrate. There was a time when you had to tune into a comedy show to hear an argument like that.”

Boston Globe bigwigs allow columnist Jeff Jacoby space in their extremely liberal publication for occasional sound perspective. His sensible thoughts, such as those above, appear among the far-more numerous plaudits for nonsensical and dangerous proposals authored by liberal colleagues.

Former Trump Administration Official Urges United States to Stay Out of UNESCO

“I don’t think UNESCO is fixable. During the Trump Administration, it was ‘Make America Great Again.’ In the Biden administration, it’s ‘Humiliate America Again.’”

After serving in both the George W. Bush and Donald Trump administrations, Kevin Moley knows enough about the corruption, pro-communism, and anti-Americanism within UNESCO to strongly recommend that the United States not rejoin the UN’s Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization.

Arizona Attorney General Defends Parental Right to Oppose School Indoctrination

Mark Brnovich

Gage Skidmore

“Parents have a First Amendment right to assemble, and speak, in order to question the decisions public officials are making — especially when it involves the well-being of their children.”

Angered at discovering the misconduct of one school-board official, Arizona Attorney General Mark Brnovich has requested an immediate federal investigation into potentially unlawful activity, including the gathering of names of outspoken parents and their children.
