GOP Chairwoman Responds to Biden's Announcement of His 2024 Candidacy

"Biden is so out-of-touch that after creating crisis after crisis, he thinks he deserves another four years. Republicans are united to beat Biden and Americans are counting the days until they can send him packing."

Republican Committee Chairwoman Ronna McDaniel could have quoted the president, who, after two years of disasters that are clouding the future for Americans, stated that he needed reelection to "finish the job." Many Americans believe that the "job" he has been busily working to complete is to destroy the independence of our nation and the freedom of its people.

More Than 45 Million People Owe $1.6 Trillion for Federal Student Loans

"The New York Times published the above statistic and asked readers who might be among the 45 million to send comments about their indebtedness."

A "pause" in student-loan payments was allowed during the Covid pandemic, and will likely end when the Supreme Court rules on the matter in June. The Biden administration is seeking partial or total forgiveness of the loans, knowing that most of the 45 million borrowers will support him in the 2024 election if some or all of the amount due is canceled. Reporters at the New York Times Business Desk have been gathering information about this matter for an extended period.

Both Political Parties Should Be Blamed for Huge Federal Indebtedness

“I, unlike you, am not a firearms expert to the same extent you may be. And if Congress wants a definition of ‘assault weapon,’ I think Congress would have to do the work but we would be there to provide technical assistance.”

ATF Director Steve Dettelbach made the above statement before the House Appropriations Subcommittee. Nevertheless, he has never hesitated to declare his support for an “assault weapons” ban while stating publicly that he can’t define the term “assault weapon.”
