Taking Action

Help Us Build an Accurate Worldview

An accurate assessment of a problem is necessary to employ the proper solution. If the assessment is not accurate, then the proposed solution will ultimately fail.

Readers and viewers of The New American know that the battle for Americans' rights, liberties, and freedom will not be won just by Congress, and they especially know that the battle certainly isn't entirely a partisan political fight (Republican vs. Democrat). Yet, the vast majority of Americans don't know that, so an inordinate amount of time, energy, and resources is wasted through partisan politics, leaving many patriots frustrated.

Since 1958, members of The John Birch Society (the parent company of The New American) have helped to teach Americans that the true battle is freedom vs. bondage. Those wanting to implement world government would do so at the expense of America's founding principles and protection of God-given rights. This New World Order, as they call it, will subjugate every single person under a worldwide tyranny. The recent World Economic Forum conference, as covered by this issue, adds credence to our long-standing claim.

Attendees at the WEF heard from Pakistani Foreign Minister Bilawal Bhutto Zardari, who said, "Here at WEF ... there's a lot of discussion about what the new world order will be... I hope this time around, once we're building this new world order or new rules-based order, the voice of the global south and the developing world is included."

Also at the WEF, Spanish Prime Minister Pedro Sánchez declared, "Supporting economic openness and multilateralism will be crucial to protect the global order that Putin is trying to destroy." As Steve Bonta covered in his WEF article in this issue (see "WEF's Agenda-setting Confab"), globalists are doubling down, trying to ram through their Great Reset by proposing the implementation of "new systems."

Still, there are many Americans who only see a small part of the problem. Unfortunately, this leads to ineffective solutions or non-solutions, including an Article V Constitutional Convention. As we asked back in 1967, what good will a convention do if the New World Order conspiracy is not defeated? A similar question should be asked of all other "solutions." What good will they do if we lose the Constitution because of Americans waging battle elsewhere? Or how will a convention help when the United States gets rolled into an EU-style union that ignores the will of the people?

During a recent staff meeting, some TNA writers observed that this year's World Economic Forum had received large amounts of negative coverage outside of The New American and the small handful of other media outlets who normally cover such news. Even CNN published an online news analysis with the headline, “Davos draws record crowds, but its relevance is fading.” The article makes the argument that since the 2008 financial disaster, globalism has been falling out of favor. Then, with the “pandemic,” support for globalism supposedly dried up faster than the supply chains.

Currently, it’s popular to be against the WEF, which is helpful, but where was the scrutiny of the climate-change narrative during the UN’s COP27 in Egypt, where The New American was mostly on its own as far as reporting is concerned? The UN has been built over many decades to be a global governmental infrastructure, complete with its own founding documents that establish government as the source, grantor, and final arbiter of rights (the complete opposite of the American system designed to protect God-given rights). Let’s not discount its role in building the New World Order.

The New American and The John Birch Society have helped a great number of Americans and others around the globe establish a correct perspective or worldview regarding the true battle of good vs. evil, as the now seemingly “open” conspiracy continues its drive toward the New World Order. We say “open” because its proponents no longer enjoy the dark cloak of secrecy.
