Making War With Words

It has been observed that language gets corrupted for specific political ends by changing the meaning of commonly used words to control the people who use them. Words that have been weaponized by the Left include bipartisanship, reproductive rights, choice, identity, progress, fairness, trans, climate, homeless, health, free, homophobe, Islamophobe, white privilege, hate speech, gender, offensive, collaboration, oppressed, repressed, indigenous, compromise, multicultural, comprehensive immigration reform, undocumented, community, green, global, consensus, change agent, equity, inequity, and moderate, as well as the always reliable dead mules of doublespeak: diversity and tolerance.

Words are now used, and understood, in an almost opposite way from their original meanings, along political lines to produce revolutionary emotionalism and mono-thought. This is why Adolf Hitler, quintessential socialist and a leading light on the Left, had a formal propaganda ministry. It's both cautionary and instructive that he believed the masses' ability to understand is both restricted and feeble. Bent language produces bent minds.

Churches Are to Blame

I greatly appreciate Selwyn Duke's articles, especially his recent article about the late, great Antonin Scalia (March 21 issue).

Antonin Scalia loved the Constitution, and so did John Adams. John Adams said that the U.S. Constitution "is made for a moral and upright people, it is wholly inadequate for the government of any other." So I ask you: Does the state dictate right and wrong, or does God? If God does, isn't it the church's responsibility to teach God's morals? If that is true, then how can we blame Washington for the demise of the Constitution? It seems to me that the church is responsible. The Constitution doesn't need to be changed via a constitutional convention. The Constitution is not the problem. The apostasy of the church is the problem. Why should Washington care about God's law, when the church doesn't? Republicans don't make a nation great; Democrats don't make a nation great; godliness makes a nation great. As long as the church is antinomian, and apostate, it doesn't matter who is president.

The Banks' Fed

In regard to your article that Democrats in the Senate have blocked the audit on the Federal Reserve Bank (February 8 issue), I would like to state that it is a betrayal by the Democratic Party to the nation.

The Fed, which is a banking cartel made up of national and international bankers, was created on December 23, 1913. The Federal Reserve Act, signed by President Woodrow Wilson, was unconstitutional. Article 1, Section 8 of our Constitution clearly states that only Congress has the power to issue or print the currency and determine its value. The Fed assumed control over our nation's finances and practically our entire government.

The creation of the Fed was an illegal act, since the Congress or a president cannot pass a law that violates the Constitution. Sadly, our nation has tolerated this illegal central bank for more than a century. The Fed is neither federal nor has any reserves. Over the years, the Fed has created massive federal debt and high inflation, which is a hidden tax that confiscates our savings, and has illegally enriched, beyond our imagination, the small banking cartel that owns it.

Of course, Obama inherited the Fed structure. However, no other president has abused the taxpayers and future generations as much as Obama has by creating trillions of additional federal debt with this illegal, privately owned central banking cartel.

Many of the owners of the Fed are also members of the Council on Foreign Relation, the Bilderberg Group, and the Trilateral Commission, which want a one-world government under the United Nations. The individuals that belong to this powerful globalist elite are the invisible government of the United States and most of the world.
