

Quick Quotes

Backing Trump and Scorching Hillary

“Hillary is extremely happy with the Obama foreign policy. It’s almost an urban legend that somehow she would be tougher, more hawkish [than Obama]. The idea that Hillary would be preferable because she would be an improvement on the Obama foreign policy is badly misguided.”

A member of the Council on Foreign Relations, John Bolton seems to be angling for a post in the Trump administration — if Trump wins in November.

He Supported Cruz for President and Now Hopes Gingrich Will Be Veep

“On the short list should be Newt Gingrich. There are others who should be on that list, including Ted Cruz and Marco Rubio, but I’m particularly intrigued with the idea of Newt Gingrich.”

Veteran conservative leader Richard Viguerie claims to want Trump to avoid choosing someone from the Republican establishment. But isn’t Gingrich part of that group?

GOP Headliners Lining Up to Support Trump

“The biggest uniting force in the Republican Party is the prospect of a Hillary Clinton presidency. That is a motivating factor in mollifying even some of Trump’s harshest critics.”

Ryan Williams, a former spokesman for Mitt Romney, expects most Republicans to end up in the Trump camp.

Author and Political Pundit a Good Prognosticator

“A guy just won the Republican nomination for President by spending no money, hiring no pollsters, running virtually no TV ads, and just saying what he truly believed no matter how many times people told him he couldn’t say that.”

Claiming in mid-2015 that Donald Trump would be the Republican nominee, Ann Coulter has lately stated that Hillary Clinton would be easier to beat in 2016 than Bernie Sanders.

Columnist Says Trump Is Not Alone in Being Inconsistent

“Criticizing Trump for inconsistency when it comes to foreign policy is a bit rich when you consider that both Democrats and Republicans have treated Pakistan as an ally, knowing full well that its secret service has trucked with terrorists and coddled the Taliban.”

New York Times columnist Frank Bruni is no fan of Donald Trump, but he refuses to overlook the hypocrisy of others.

Cartoonist Fired After Targeting Agribusinesses

“In the year 2015, the CEOs of Monsanto, DuPont Pioneer and John Deere made more money than 2,129 Iowa farmers.”

He supplied more than 1,000 cartoons over 20 years to Iowa's Farm News, but Rick Friday was fired when a seed company withdrew its advertising because of the above comment made by one of the characters in his cartoon.

Muslim Leader Denounces ISIS, Enjoys Its Criticism

"It's an honor to be denounced by ISIS. I consider it one of my greatest accomplishments in life."

A sharp critic of ISIS, Washington D.C.-based Imam Suhaib Webb regularly refutes the religious claims of the Islamic State. He and other critics of ISIS receive numerous threats, but they refuse to back down.

London's New Mayor Swears His Oath of Office on the Koran

"The palace called me and said, 'What type of Bible do you want to swear on?' When I said the Koran, they said 'We haven't got one.' So I took one with me."

Winning election by 57 to 43 percent over Conservative Party candidate Zac Goldsmith, Labour Party candidate Sadiq Khan, a Muslim, chose to swear the oath of office on Islam's holy book.
