Phony Liberal Outrage

Isn't it interesting that the same "liberals" who believe that adults should have the freedom to marry members of their own sex, and to use whichever restroom they desire, are incensed that Judge Roy Moore, the Republican senatorial candidate who failed to win an election after 24-hour-a-day vilification by liberals, allegedly desired to date young women 40 years ago. If the young women were over the age of consent, his attraction to them would certainly be legal. Apparently, only one accusation against him involves an underage girl.

It seems that the case against Judge Moore is completely lacking in evidence. The phony liberals will stop at nothing to control the U.S. Senate.

Meanwhile, the phony Republican leadership was willing to sell Judge Moore out. None of the forces outraged at Judge Moore seems the least concerned at the huge problems of condom distribution to young girls in government schools, or about pregnancies involving young teenagers.

This issue proves that the Left really does lack scruples, or a moral compass.

The Motivation Is Money

Thank you TNA for being a source of sanity and common sense in a world that seems to have lost its balance — a world of false impressions. It is so wearing to continually have to read and listen to the rantings of individuals who profess to be for some ideological concept, when their real prime motivation is financial. We are all aware that politicians and biased media do that as a matter of course, but it's also done by business people who are seeking to increase their bottom line.

For politicians the ideology of sanctuary cities has the veil of helping people. It is what they want the public to believe. The real goal is about getting a segment of the population who will vote for them. They seek to remain in office, as it is one of the most lucrative jobs in the nation. The funds and benefits that are received by federal politicians boggle the mind. How many of them who have served for some time leave office with limited resources?

The ideology of supporting programs that are supposedly environmentally sound, for many business people, isn't about saving the environment. It's about setting a plan that will help their finances. Warren Buffet, for example, supports politicians who are against pipelines. Is that ideological or due to the fact that much of his fortune comes from shipping oil by rail? Media personalities will spout numerous claims about ideological positions that have no basis in fact. Their goal is to increase the audience for their ranting, which will increase the funding of their media and their salary.

President Donald Trump is not getting the support that he needs to accomplish the goals that were sought by those who voted for him. One of those goals was to drain the swamp. The situation can be dressed up with hours of rhetoric, but our legislative alligators don't want the swamp drained. It is too lucrative. It's that simple.

Our Democrat Party

What has become of our once-noble Democrat Party? There were pictures of adults screaming at the night sky on the anniversary of Donald Trump's election. (It was as though they were having a temper tantrum — adults!) When Trump won, our Democrat college students had to have crying rooms and counseling and hot chocolate. Some schools cancelled mid-term exams. Also, I just heard on the radio that a recent Pew survey determined that 77 percent of Democrat college graduates do not believe that sex is determined at birth — they called it the sex assigned by the doctor. It continued that 57 percent of Democrats who had only a high-school education believed it. Maybe more schooling leaves you with less common sense. Republicans were surveyed too, and 19 percent believed it. I hope there is a return to reason.
