Becoming Middle Class

When is it time for all Americans' turn at middle-class privilege?

Some of us have been working for three, four, five, or six generations trying to escape poverty, but just as we near the top of the poverty hole and are peeping over the edge into the middle class, lawbreakers barge in and step on us and usurp our turn, our dream, and push us right back, taking our middle-class promise. It's not fair. We are law-abiding citizens. We deserve middle-class stature; we have paid the dues in blood and sweat.

And for invaders, breaking the law is not enough: They tell us how to run our country. It is in no way their country, they should have no say. They are lawbreakers.

What is the reason the Democrat party is siding with lawbreakers against citizens? Power, power, and power! Power to implement their globalist world.

Why do Democrats need these lawbreakers? To vote. Since Roe v. Wade passed, 60 million children have been aborted, and since abortion is a liberal issue, one must surmise that most of the abortions were liberal. Hence, the need for replacement voters. These lawbreakers are their answer.

Killing in Yemen

Regarding the Senate vote to halt the continuing devastation in Yemen, supposedly Senator Cory Gardner (R-Colo.) said that U.S. involvement in Yemen was the "right call." How is it the "right call," considering the 1.2+ million cases of cholera; 60,223 civilian deaths from violence (including 28,182 so far this year); 85,000 starvation deaths since 2016; and the systematic destruction, by bombardment, of the countryside and of the water purification and sewage treatment facilities by the American government — encouraged and supplied by the murderous Saudi regime?

How, in the words of Senator Gardner, is this horrendous death toll "in our national interest"?

How many more Yemenis must die before we wake up to the hell being inflicted on innocent civilians? Ten times that number? Or must it exceed the notorious six-million mark of the Holocaust?

Would Gardner lose his Senate seat if he deviated in the least from the "party line" of the D.C. war hawks, who justify each and every atrocity, anywhere, as necessary in their jihad against the people and government of Iran?

Wouldn't our consciences and that of our nation be better served if Gardner was removed forthwith and tried for "crimes against humanity," i.e., war crimes?

America Reconfigured

Last night I saw on television that “Baby It’s Cold Outside” is being banned because it is too controversial to play. Apparently, it is sexist against women because the man persists in trying to get her to stay after she has already said no. It is a perfectly beautiful courtship song, but there is a certain faction among us that thinks it exploits women. Several other lovely ballads were mentioned as being cancelled. In addition, the Huffington Post called Rudolph the Red-nosed Reindeer enemy No. 1!

I began thinking of what else this sort of thinking has spoiled for most of us. I was once in a Miss America preliminary pageant in my state, and I loved the contest and the other girls, and it was fun all around. I watched the Miss America Pageant each year with great enjoyment, but that tradition has been reconfigured, and the beauty and joy have been removed. Likewise the Academy Awards night used to be one to draw us all around the television to see which one of our favorite movies would be judged best. It has been spoiled. Football games are no longer fun since they have become political. The Boy Scouts and Girl Scouts have been remade in a different image. I yearn for the innocent, sweeter, simpler days of just a few years ago.
