Inside Track

In Presidential First, Trump Attends, Addresses March for Life

Donald Trump made history January 24 when he attended and addressed the 46th annual March for Life in Washington, D.C., the first president ever to appear at the iconic pro-life gathering, which began in 1974, the year after the U.S. Supreme Court effectively legalized abortion in the United States with its infamous Roe v. Wade decision.

“All of us here understand an eternal truth,” the president told the March for Life audience, made up of tens of thousands of pro-life individuals of all ages and backgrounds. “Every child is a precious and sacred gift from God. Together, we must protect, cherish, and defend the dignity and the sanctity of every human life.”

Trump declared, “When we see the image of a baby in the womb, we glimpse the majesty of God’s creation. When we hold a newborn in our arms, we know the endless love that each child brings to a family. When we watch a child grow, we see the splendor that radiates from each human soul.”

He went on to list, in part, the accomplishments his administration has made on behalf of the unborn, as well as for religious freedom in general. However, he added, “The far left is working to erase our God-given rights, shut down faith-based charities, ban religious leaders from the public square, and silence Americans who believe in the sanctity of life. They are coming after me because I am fighting for you and we are fighting for those who have no voice. And we will win because we know how to win.... You’ve been winning for a long time.”

The president concluded his remarks with the observation that “every human soul is divine and every human life, born and unborn, is made in the holy image of Almighty God. Together we will defend this truth all across our magnificent land. We will set free the dreams of our people. And with determined hope, we look forward to all of the blessings that will come from the beauty, talent, purpose, nobility, and grace of every American child.”

UN Throws Cash at North Korea to Fight “Global Warming”

A United Nations agency is sending large amounts of American taxpayer money and Western know-how to the mass-murdering dictatorship ruling North Korea, official UN documents released in December 2019 show. Officially, at least, the cash and training is supposed to help the brutal regime in Pyongyang fight alleged man-made “climate change” and access even more UN money. But in reality, analysts suggested, the UN funding would almost certainly be used to prop up dictator Kim Jong-un’s savage tyranny and lavish lifestyle.

The initial funding will be almost a million dollars, but that round of funds is supposed to help the regime unlock even more going forward. The decision to fund North Korean oppression with Western tax dollars was made last month by the UN “Green Climate Fund” (GCF).

The GCF has approved a program known as “Readiness and Preparatory Support for Capacity Building of NDA (National Designated Authorities) and establishment of a National Strategy Framework for engagement with GCF in the DPRK.” The confusing and deliberately verbose title serves to conceal a simple agenda: Prop up the mass-murdering dictatorship with Western money, technology, and expertise under the guise of battling the mythical bogeyman known as “man-made global warming.”

According to the dictatorship’s request for funds, which has been published online by the GCF, activities under the project will involve developing a “package of training and capacity building exercises.” These training programs will help support the regime to “better coordinate and manage GCF and other climate finance,” and to “better engage with GCF and providers of climate finance.”

Under the guise of fighting global warming, the UN has been getting away with all sorts of criminal activities — extorting Western taxpayers, expanding its power, bullying industry, engaging in further infringements on liberty and free markets, brainwashing children with “climate education,” and so much more. For the sake of Americans and Koreans, it is time for Congress and President Trump to step in and end these schemes now.

USDA Will Tighten Requirements for SNAP; Some States Are Suing

A new Trump administration rule change, set to go into effect in April, will result in nearly 700,000 people across the country being dropped from the Supplemental Nutrition Assistance Program (SNAP), commonly known as “food stamps.”

In December 2019, the Trump administration said it would limit states’ ability to issue eligibility waivers to single, able-bodied adults between the ages of 18 and 49.

A January 26 New York Times report noted that the Trump administration sees record low unemployment and steady economic growth as making this an opportune time to nudge people off the SNAP federal assistance program.

Some states have taken to suing the USDA over the changes. A January 18 report from Capital Public Radio in Sacramento said that 14 states, including California, filed suit on January 16 against the Trump administration to block the rule that would eliminate food stamps for those who did not meet the new work requirements.

That report noted that under current federal law, able-bodied adults under the age of 50 with no dependent children must either be working at least 20 hours a week or in vocational training to get food stamps consistently. Otherwise, they can only receive three months of the benefit every three years. However, up until now, states and counties have been able to waive those requirements by demonstrating that the local labor market made it hard for people to find jobs. All but six California counties have waivers. The new federal rule will make that waiver much more difficult to obtain.

There is no authorization in the Constitution for the federal government to appropriate a single cent for programs such as SNAP, but once people become dependent on them, cutting all recipients off in one fell swoop could indeed be traumatic for many. However, the Trump administration's proposal will reduce the program gradually, and is a fairly humane step in the right direction.

Does New Hillary Clinton Docuseries Portend 2020 Run?

AP Images

The new Hulu docuseries about Hillary Clinton and the 2016 presidential campaign — entitled Hillary — premiered January 25 at the Sundance Film Festival in Park City, Utah. Not surprisingly, the four-part series, which is set to be released to the public on March 6, is said to be a non-critical look at Clinton and the events surrounding the 2016 presidential election.

In many reviews of the series, Clinton comes off as a straight-talking pragmatist, especially in relation to starry-eyed socialist Bernie Sanders.

Snippets of the docuseries have come out in which Clinton attacks Sanders, saying, “He was in Congress for years. He had one senator support him. Nobody likes him, nobody wants to work with him, he got nothing done. He was a career politician. It’s just all baloney and I feel so bad that people got sucked into it.”

Clinton clearly stakes out her position as a centrist while accusing Sanders of offering ideas that aren’t realistic: “I had people in my campaign say, ‘Just say “free college.” Millennials love it,’” Clinton explains. “And I said, ‘no.’”

One of the recurring themes in the documentary is also a recurring theme of Clinton’s life — especially in the years since she lost the 2016 election to Donald Trump. Put succinctly: It wasn't her fault.

Poor Hillary. Everyone around her ends up sabotaging her. Whether it's her husband's serial infidelity, the media's not-fawning-enough coverage of her, or the FBI investigating her use of a private e-mail server to conduct State Department business, she's always the victim.

Her post-election treatise on the result of the 2016 election, What Happened, is full of the same responsibility-dodging narrative. It was Russia. It was the Democratic National Committee. It was misogyny. It was Barack Obama. It was Bernie Sanders. It was the "basket of deplorables." The list goes on and on.

With the release of this docuseries, Hillary is clearly saying, "I'm still here." If a "draft Hillary" movement — real or manufactured — suddenly arose, it's unlikely that Clinton could say no to another run.
