Stereotyping

It is entirely normal to harbor preconceived ideas and suppositions about various demographic groups. Not fair and just, but normal.

We cannot possibly know all the members of a demographic group, so we draw conclusions about the entire group based on those members of the group we observe, and those members of the group with whom we have personal dealings. We assume the actions and behaviors were derived from a common cultural group ethos.

Group social cohesion depends upon a common unwritten code of behavior (lex non scripta), and politically incorrect upstream swimmers sooner or later wind up being social outcasts from the group. So it should come as no surprise when we judge the many on the basis of only a few.

They're All Bad

I am sick and tired of hearing about protesters who are good and anarchists who are bad. They are one and the same. The "protesters" give cover and protection to Black Lives Matter. The so-called good people are marching with Antifa, which wants to destroy America as we know it and love it.

If the so-called protesters are so good, why don't they stay home, milk their cows, plow their fields, slop their hogs, plant their gardens, teach their children good manners, go to church, fly the American flag, support law enforcement, vote for those that support traditional America, and wish four winds on these vile revolutionists?

It would be a snowy day where the devil is going before I would march with a group of thugs who would destroy the great life I have had in America.

The fox is in the chicken house. We better get him out before he sucks the eggs, eats the young, and drags off the old hen and rooster, or the house that great Americans have built for us will be desolate.

Look what happened to Christians in 1949 when the communists took over in China. We never say, "God bless Mao."

Plow Under USMCA

A headline in Western AG on Thursday July 9 said AG organizations applaud the implementation of the USMCA (United States-Mexico-Canada trade deal). It is disheartening. Just like NAFTA, the USMCA allows for the continued dumping of cheaper subsidized and inferior foreign imports of beef and other commodities on our markets, labeled as products of the USA.

It also undermines the sovereignty of the USA, setting up appointed international tribunals and commissions and effectively gutting the Constitution.

Chapter 23 deals with gender-related issues promoted by the LGTBQ community and aimed at destroying Christian morality.

The USMCA was written by an Obama acolyte by the name of Robert Lighthizer; the agreement's purpose is to create what is called a North American Union similar to the European Union.

There is a word for such dealing; it is called treason. The USMCA and the Constitution are diametrically opposed to each other. You cannot support both. A recall would be in order for all of those who voted for the USMCA.
