Netflix Slams NRA and Gun Rights With Blasphemous Cartoon

YouTube

As NewsBusters reported March 17, “The liberal fever dream of disarming lawful gun owners came through in Season Three of Netflix’s Paradise P.D. Along with attacking gun rights, it was also blasphemous against Christianity, featuring a video of a gun-wielding Jesus that turns into a porno.”

“The crazy, over-the-top animated series was released on March 12 and took on the topic by ridiculing white male gun owners for using guns as a replacement for testosterone in Episode 4, titled “Trigger Warning,” the site continued. “Paradise’s police chief confesses to needing a gun to get an erection and the head of the NRA says the initials stand for Nards Removed Association.”

Among other things, the episode portrays a tour of the NRA, which “includes a gun pit with a dead kid buried in it and the corpse of Charlton Heston used as a statue, complete with a quote — ‘Pry this gun from my cold, dead hands and win a Republican Senate seat,’” NewsBusters also relates. “The head of the NRA, Mr. Chip F[]-Yeah, shows them a video using Jesus as a prop to show how ‘guns make a better world.’ The video is horrifically offensive, with Jesus coming down from the Cross to kill his persecutors with machine guns then have sex with two women.”

Moreover, the “guns take on the personality of their owners,” NewsBusters further informs about the episode. “The NRA programs them to shoot anyone deemed a threat. When a black officer walks into the room, for example, the guns turn on him.”

The only good news is that this propaganda is so over the top that it may not be as effective as its immature writers would like.

Christians and “right-wingers” are targeted today not because they’re a threat, but partially because they’re not a threat, at least not physically. The Left is greatly threatened, however, by the moral standard Christianity upholds, for its resurrection would mean the imperilment of their cherished sexual devolutionary passions and addictions.

Lockdowns Cost More Lives Than They Save

LucaLorenzelli/iStock/Getty Images Plus

The evidence that lockdowns have prevented COVID-19 deaths is “inconclusive” at best, avers City Journal columnist John Tierney in a March 21 article. “But one effect is clear: more deaths from other causes, especially among the young and middle-aged, minorities, and the less affluent.”

Tierney marshals an array of indisputable evidence to bolster his contentions. He is especially interested in whether the lockdowns led to an increase or decrease in excess mortality, the number of deaths in one year that one would not expect based on trends in previous years. “That measure rose among older Americans because of Covid-19,” he notes, “but it rose at an even sharper rate among people aged 15 to 54, and most of those excess deaths were not attributed to the virus.”

There are a variety of reasons for this, most of which can be traced directly to lockdowns. Many people either were too frightened or were unable to obtain treatment for serious health issues. “The reported levels of anxiety, depression, and suicidal thoughts increased dramatically, as did alcohol sales and fatal drug overdoses,” writes Tierney. Meanwhile, motor-vehicle accident fatalities went through the roof despite Americans’ staying home much more, probably because of increased substance abuse and reckless driving on empty roads.

The very people politicians claim to be helping are suffering the most. “The number of excess deaths not involving Covid-19 has been especially high in U.S. counties with more low-income households and minority residents, who were disproportionately affected by lockdowns,” pens Tierney. And their problems aren’t over: Researchers expect the United States to experience more than a million excess deaths over the next two decades because of unemployment’s lasting effects.

Don’t expect government to solve the problems it created, either. In fact, federal stimulus checks, supposedly aimed at offsetting the economic effects of the lockdowns, are actually causing an increase in drug overdoses, county officials in several states recently told Fox News.

Poll: Most Americans View “Cancel Culture” as a Threat to

A majority of Americans say they view “cancel culture” as a threat to their freedom, according to a new Harvard CAPS-Harris Poll survey conducted for The Hill and published March 29.

According to the survey, 64 percent of respondents said there is “a growing cancel culture” that is a threat to their freedom, while 36 percent said they did not view it as a threat to their freedom.

Additionally, the poll found that 36 percent of Americans said cancel culture is a “big problem,” while 32 percent called it a “moderate problem.” Another 20 percent said it was a “small problem,” and 13 percent said it is “not a problem.”

There is no single accepted definition of the term “cancel culture,” but it is generally used in reference to unaccountable groups successfully applying pressure to punish someone for perceived wrong opinions and words or actions deemed offensive. Victims of cancel culture often end up losing their jobs and/or having their reputations destroyed, and are sometimes harassed, threatened, and even physically harmed.

One of the most distinctive characteristics of cancel culture is the fact that its adherents are nearly always progressive liberals. The victims, i.e., those being “canceled,” are typically either conservatives or libertarians, or just people driven by common sense, knowledge of history, and statistics. Very rarely is it the other way around.

Cancel culture certainly has no reservations against operating with double standards. We see conservative media such as Zero Hedge and the Federalist being pressured by Google to censor their content and being barred from Google’s ad platform if they don’t. However, this never happens to mainstream-media outlets that promote acts of violence committed by “woke” leftist forces, no matter how ugly they are. Twitter and Facebook canceled the president of the United States while keeping Chinese communists and Islamic fundamentalists and complying with censorship requests from autocratic governments such as Russia and Turkey.

The CAPS-Harris Poll survey shows that many Americans are waking up to how bad it really is.

IMF to Redistribute U.S. Wealth Via Proto-global Currency

metamorworks/iStock/Getty Images Plus

The International Monetary Fund, in cahoots with the Biden administration, is preparing to issue $1 trillion worth of new “Special Drawing Rights” (SDRs), paving the way to replacing the U.S. dollar as the global reserve currency while redistributing America’s remaining wealth to foreigners and Third World regimes. It is all part of a much-broader agenda being peddled as the “Great Reset” that will — if successful — fundamentally transform the world. COVID-19 is merely the pretext.

According to media reports from late March, the Biden Treasury, led by radical activist Janet Yellen, is so anxious to shower U.S. dollars on foreign nations that it is even working quietly to bypass the U.S. Congress. Under U.S. law, America’s elected representatives must approve any SDR issuance by the IMF in which the U.S. government allocates more than $120 billion — the amount of its proportional stake in the global organization — during any five-year period.

The U.S. share of the new $1 trillion SDR allocation being pushed by the IMF and its allies amounts to almost $175 billion, triggering the legal requirement for congressional approval. To get around that, the IMF and Yellen are scheming to break the $1 trillion issuance into two parts. The first batch, to be issued this year, would amount to $650 billion total — the highest amount possible without Congress. Part two would come next year.

Special Drawing Rights are basically the proto-global currency issued by the IMF that globalists are planning to use to replace the U.S. dollar as the global reserve asset held by governments and central banks. It is based on a basket of currencies including the U.S. dollar, the euro, the Japanese yen, the British pound, and the Communist Chinese yuan.

Instead of a Great Reset and a switch to a global currency and global centralization of power, a real reset to a legitimate U.S. dollar backed by something of value is the only true, sustainable solution to the economic catastrophe facing humanity.
