Biden, Mayorkas Released a Third Ibarra Brother After Arrest at Border; Brother No. 2 Linked to Murderous Venezuelan Gang

It wasn't enough for the Biden Administration to catch and then release Venezuelan illegal alien Jose Ibarra, suspected of murdering nursing student Laken Riley in Athens, Georgia.

Nor was it enough for the administration to do the same with his criminal brother Diego, a green-card fraudster.

It also released his brother Argenis, another estimable "undocumented migrant" whom President Joe Biden welcomed with open arms.

More disturbingly, court documents say Diego is linked to the dangerous gang believed to be responsible for the mauling of two New York City cops.

Arrested With Brothers

"Argenis Ibarra, 24, was apprehended in Athens by ICE agents on Feb. 23, the same day that his brothers Jose and Diego Ibarra were also taken into custody during the investigation into Riley's death at the university's intramural fields," the Atlanta Journal-Constitution reported, citing Immigration and Customs Enforcement.

Cops arrested Diego on February 23, the day after Riley's murder. He had passed a fake green card to get a job at the University of Georgia. Argenis was arrested the same day.

But "ICE said Argenis Ibarra is in custody at the Stewart Detention Center in Lumpkin, Georgia, 'pending further investigation of his immigration case.' The agency said he is due to attend an immigration hearing 'later in 2024' in Philadelphia," the AJC reported.

Remarkably, the newspaper continued, the Biden administration actually did the right thing when border agents bagged Diego and Argenis on April 3 last year and returned them to Mexico.

But that resolve didn't last:

Diego and Argenis Ibarra both reentered the United States illegally on April 30, 2023, near El Paso, Texas, ICE confirmed. It said Argenis Ibarra was released from the custody of U.S. Border Patrol "with a notice to appear" on May 4, 2023.

Diego Ibarra was placed by ICE in its Alternatives to Detention program on May 11, 2023, and released from custody the following day with the requirement that he wear an ankle monitor, the agency said. It said he was removed from the program and listed as an absconder on May 25, 2023, after cutting off his ankle monitor, which was ultimately located on the side of a road in Colorado.

Gang Affiliation

But Diego is more than a run-of-mill shoplifter, a federal motion for detention says. When border agents encountered him and four other illegal-alien thugs on April 30, he attacked an agent and tried to bite him.

Cops nailed him for drunk driving on September 24, 2023. Two days later, he was involved in a “domestic incident” during which, his girlfriend said, he slapped her after taking her cell phone. After that, he shoplifted twice at the same Walmart, once in October and again in December.

But the document also said he’s affiliated with Tren de Aragua (TdA), “a Venezuelan gang, which has been involved in recent violent confrontations with law enforcement and civilian victims in New York and elsewhere throughout the United States.” With some 5,000 members, TdA is the largest organized crime outfit in Venezuela.

Those “violent confrontations” include the gang-beating of two cops in New York City in January. The gang uses low-tech means to carry out high-tech street robberies.

John Miller, former intelligence chief for the city cops, said the crew uses mopeds and scooters, for “organized retail theft. They were doing snatches on the street. iPhones, iPads, clothing, so on and so forth.”

Of course, Manhattan District Attorney Alvin Bragg released some of the suspects without bail.

TdA was formed in the mid to late 2000s in the Tocarón prison in the Venezuelan state of Aragua. Multiple U.S. law enforcement agencies have reported a heavy presence of TdA members in several states, particularly Texas, New York, Illinois, Florida, and Georgia.

Diego, the motion said, has tattoos suggesting he is a TdA member:

Some of Ibarra’s tattoos suggest that he is a member of TdA. As shown below, Ibarra has a five-pointed crown tattoo on the left side of his neck, and five-pointed stars on the right side of his neck. Ibarra also has a teardrop tattoo under his right eye — teardrop tattoos are often associated with gangs and gang culture and are not exclusive to TdA, or any single gang.

He also used gang hand-signs on social media, and, as do other gang members, wears Chicago Bulls attire, as photos on social media show.

Other photos show Diego holding a firearm, another violation of the law, and he posted “an image of what appears to be a Glock and a Smith & Wesson pistol positioned next to an open box of ammunition.”

In September, with Biden’s approval, Homeland Security Secretary Alejandro Mayorkas authorized the extension of temporary protected status for Venezuelan illegals. TPS stops federal authorities from deporting illegals if their home countries suffer “increased instability and lack of safety due to the enduring humanitarian, security, political, and environmental conditions.”

“There are currently approximately 242,700 TPS beneficiaries under Venezuela’s existing TPS designation,” the extension announcement said. “There are an additional approximately 472,000 nationals of Venezuela who may be eligible under the redesignation of Venezuela.”

How many criminals in general — and gang members in particular — Mayorkas has let into the country is not known, but they are clearly a major crime problem, if not a national security risk, as FBI officials recently said.

When Mayorkas will begin to worry about “increasing instability and lack of safety” in American cities because of the illegal-alien colonists he has released is also not known.
