Reports: Wash. State Prisons Put Dangerous Men In Women's Facilities. Judge Blocks Records Release

A lawsuit in Washington State has confirmed that “transgender” madness has so thoroughly poisoned the judicial system that men who rape and murder, yet “identify” as women, are housed in women's prisons.

A federal judge has temporarily blocked the full release of records pertaining to men now housed in the state's prisons for women. The judge acted after the American Civil Liberties Union and Disability Rights Washington, which represented “transgender” inmates, objected to the state's releasing the records sought by several news organizations. They requested the records after an initial report from a talk radio host.

Yet still, the Women's Liberation Front reports, the ruling contains enough information about the hoaxers to confirm the first report.

Women prisoners in Washington face the threat of rape and murder from dangerous men who pretend to be women. And at least one, the initial report claimed, has been raped.

Original Story

The latest account of society gone berserk began in March, when KIRO Radio's Dori Monson reported news from a whistleblower prison employee.

“The women's facility in Pierce County has adopted the practice of allowing a transfer for any person who identifies as female,” Monson reported. “Those transfers are being housing in the general population with female cellmates, the employee says.”

Understandably, inmates and guards alike were terrified. The employee explained the background of one hoaxer who raped a woman the minute authorities were stupid enough to transfer him, Monson reported:

The employee described a prison system in which the authorities are off their rockers:

Among the inmates transferred to the women's facility is Donna Perry, formerly known as Douglas Perry, who was convicted for killing three sex workers. Before being charged, Perry reportedly went to Thailand for gender reassignment surgery. Prosecutors during the trial claimed that Perry had undergone the surgery to avoid suspicion for the killings.

Also recently transferred in was Hobby Bingham, now known as Princess Zoe Marie Andromeda Love, who was convicted for having sex with a 12-year-old girl. Bingham is alleged by the anonymous employee to have had sex with a female inmate at the women's facility.

FOIA Requests

News outlets quickly filed freedom of information requests. But Judge Thomas Rice, appointed by former President Barack Obama, denied the requests yesterday. On behalf of "five unnamed transgender inmates," the Spokesman-Review reported, the Eastern District Court judge preliminarily enjoined the state's department of corrections from releasing the requested records, which include complaints about the hoaxers.

But that didn't stop information from getting out, WOLF reported.

The transferred inmate, according to the employee, is incarcerated for a sex offense and has "fully functional male genitalia, a history of violence and sexual depravity in the community, and has been found guilty of sexual assault against other inmates while housed in the men's facilities."

"He is a proven sexual predator, having committed multiple crimes against women, yet the State of Washington had no problem moving him into a women's facility and housing him with the most vulnerable in our population (our mental health unit)," the employee wrote.

The records reveal that authorities have transferred three men to women's facilities since January 1, that seven men "who identify as female, non-binary, or any other gender identity that are housed in a women's facility," and that only one woman who so identifies is housed in men's prison.

As well, WOLF reported:

The DOC records also confirm that there are prison infraction records and PREA (Prison Rape Elimination Act) records against several men who are currently housed in women's prisons, including 309 pages of infraction records for a particular male inmate. However, the federal Judge has decided that none of those documents can be released to the public ... pending the Judge's final rulings on the ACLU's claims that releasing these records would violate the male prisoners' privacy rights.

Amusingly, the ACLU argued that releasing the records would endanger the men. Child rapist Princess Zoe Marie Andromeda Love is undoubtedly tickled pink.
