Waukesha Massacre Suspect Identified. Bailed Out of Jail Days Ago. D.A. Is Anti-bail Leftist

Multiple reports have identified the “person of interest” whom police arrested in connection with the Waukesha Parade Massacre as Darrell Edward Brooks, Jr., a longtime criminal and convicted strangler who was out on bail for felony bail jumping.

The 39-year-old black thug’s rap sheet goes back to 1999, and includes multiple violent crimes and other felonies. He has three open criminal cases, and has committed dozens of crimes.

He is accused of driving an SUV into the Milwaukee suburb’s annual event. The attack sent 40 to the hospital and killed five, including small children. The Associated Press reported that he fled the scene of a crime.

Parade Attack

Video of the attack shows a red Ford Escape smashing through the parade as terrified onlookers run for their lives.

“Police squads were at a Milwaukee address used by Darrell Brooks Jr. after his name was mentioned on the scanner,” Heavy.com reported:

[T]wo Milwaukee police squads were outside the home listed to Brooks on N. 19th St. in Milwaukee, Wisconsin. Heavy also obtained audio from the scanner indicating Waukesha police obtained an ID in the name Darrell Brooks Jr. inside the red Ford Escape they recovered in connection with the Waukesha parade investigation. He also goes by the name Darrell E. Brooks Jr., and Darrell Edward Brooks, Jr. He is 39-years-old. He had prolific social media accounts, but some have already been deleted.

According to Waukesha police scanner audio, the name of the suspect who drove the vehicle into participants in the parade is Darrell Brooks. One officer says he had left his ID in the vehicle, & another describes him as a black male with dreadlocks. #Waukesha #Wisconsin

As well, a woman sent Heavy.com a photograph of the suspect in the SUV as he passed them.

Heavy.com also assembled Brooks's lengthy rap sheet, which includes, again, a felony strangulation and suffocation conviction in Nekoosa, Wisconsin, in 2010.

But the Nekoosa Strangler's career was 11 years going at that point. He began his life of crime in 1999 with a charge of substantial battery, continued with drug arrests, resisting officers, and bail jumping. But the details of his worthless career are less important now than what happened yesterday, and why it happened.

The convicted felon posted $1,000 bail to get out of jail a few days ago on a felony bail-jumping charge.

In June, he was cuffed for these felonies:

- 2nd-Degree Recklessly Endangering / Use of a Dangerous Weapon
- 2nd-Degree Recklessly Endangering Safety / Use of a Dangerous Weapon
- Possession [of a] Firearm-Convicted of a Felony

Conservative commentator Mike Cernovich fingered Milwaukee District Attorney John Chisholm, who bragged about abolishing cash bail and sent congratulations to leftist pro-criminal District Attorney Chesa Boudin when he was elected in San Francisco.

A search of Nevada's sex-offender registry turns up a Darrell Edward Brooks that strongly resembles the man identified as the suspect in the parade attack. The record says he is "non-compliant."

Police have not officially identified Brooks as the suspect, Heavy.com reported, but the Associated Press, citing anonymous police sources, confirmed the website's early reports.

A "law enforcement source" told the wire service that the convicted strangler was fleeing a crime. Police fired at the SUV, AP reported, which apparently confirms Heavy.com's claim that a bullet hit the windshield.

BREAKING: A law enforcement official says investigators are examining whether the person of interest in a deadly Wisconsin parade crash was fleeing from a crime.

Unsurprisingly, Brooks doesn't like President Trump. The hardened criminal reposted a fake and filthy tweet, supposedly from ex-Clinton bimbo Monica Lewinsky, which said that she offered to give President Trump oral sex in the Oval Office because "that's the only thing that can convince Republicans to impeach."

He has also tweeted anti-police material, and apparently is a budding rap artist. A YouTube video features Brooks in front of a red Ford Escort.
