It's Heels Down for Drag Queens at Nellis Air Force Base. Friday Night Show Staged

If a guy wants to be a queen for a day, the public library isn't the only place to learn. He can also visit Nellis Air Force Base, which recently held its first-ever drag queen show.

"A base spokesperson," Breitbart News reported, confirmed that grown men were prancing around in heels and feather boas to entertain rank-and-file airmen and airwomen.

The latest news is in keeping with the Biden Regime's war on good order and discipline in the military. In March, the Pentagon announced new policies on "transgender medical treatment," which will be available to any servicemember who "needs" it.

Biden and his military underlings are determined to turn the armed forces into a Weimaresque cabaret.

Air Force Statement

The Breitbart report on the drag queen show included this statement from the base:

Nellis Air Force Base and the 99th Air Base Wing hosted its first-ever drag show Thursday, June 17, at the Nellis Club. The event was sponsored by a private organization and provided an opportunity for attendees to learn more about the history and significance of drag performance art within the LGBT+ community.

Ensuring our ranks reflect and are inclusive of the American people is essential to the morale, cohesion, and readiness of the military. Nellis Air Force Base is committed to providing and championing an environment that is characterized by equal opportunity, diversity and inclusion.

If not for an Air Force podcaster who disclosed the event, Breitbart reported, the world outside the base would never have known about it. "DRAG-U-NELLIS" and "CLASS IS IN SESSION," a digital flyer read. "Discover the significance of Drag in the LGBT+ Community at the Nellis Club."

The dancing and prancing commenced at 5 p.m. on June 17 and was "sponsored by the Nellis Top 3." That outfit is supposed to "enhance the morale, esprit de corps, of all enlisted personnel assigned to the Wing and to facilitate cooperation between members of the top three enlisted grades," its Facebook page says.

The base Top III will provide a forum for its members to meet, share personal experiences and expertise, and assist one another. It may function as an added channel of communication within the chain of command, between the commander, and the enlisted force on Nellis AFB.

A woman who attended the show wrote that she “had a fun night ... at a drag Queen show at nellis afb last night,” Breitbart reported.

What else do they do at Nellis besides watch drag queens?

The base website explains what happens at the “home of the fighter pilot” this way:

Nellis Air Force Base is home to the U.S. Air Force Warfare Center, the largest and most demanding advanced air combat training mission in the world. At Nellis, we provide training for composite strike forces which include every type of aircraft in the Air Force inventory. Training is conducted in conjunction with air and ground units of the Army, Navy, Marine Corps and air forces from our allied nations. The crews do not come to learn how to fly, but instead how to be the best combat aviators in the world.

The base is also home to the storied Thunderbirds, the service’s official demonstration team.

Tranny Madness

Hosting drag queens isn’t the first daffy idea from the Air Force. In February 2010, the Air Force Academy created a “worship circle” for pagans to practice witchcraft.

The academy recently fell victim to a hate hoax.

Those aside, it’s clear now that homosexuals and sexual deviants now control the U.S. military. Indeed, drag queen shows might be the least of its problems. “Transgenderers” can now serve openly, and the military will pay for sex-change operations and other abusive treatment, instead of providing the psychiatric help those mentally ill service members need.

President Trump had banned “transgenderers” from the service, but Biden reversed that order. He even picked a “transgender woman” to run the regime’s transition review of the Defense Department. A “transgender woman” is a man who mistakenly thinks he is the opposite sex.

Biden has not said how soon military men will be required to wear Ferragamo heels and carry a Louis Vuitton purse to pass sensitivity training and get a promotion.
