Gutting Freedom: One College at a Time

From FreedomProject Media:

What comes from decades of monolithic progressive campus culture, where radical left wing politics are championed and traditional and conservative ideas shunned and stigmatized?

You get the recent revolting and anti-American nonsense consuming the campus of Orange Coast College in California. The saga began in December 2016 when professor Olga Stable-Cox used her classroom to bash President Trump, calling his election an “act of terrorism” and indirectly threatening students who supported the president. A student who filmed the tirade was suspended from the university and threatened with a lawsuit, before finally being allowed back on campus. The offending professor, meanwhile, was awarded teacher of the year honors from a grateful faculty all too eager to show their support for her bullying and politicized classroom.

Long gone are the days when Democrats and progressives championed the culture of the whistle blower. It’s one thing to leak classified information that harms the Trump administration. It’s another thing altogether when harassed conservative students try to expose bias and discrimination in progressive classrooms. That kind of social activism must be squelched, and pronto.
