CBP Commissioner Breaks Tradition with New CBP Chief

Customs and Border Protection Commissioner Gil Kerlikowske named Mark Morgan as chief of the U.S. Border Patrol on June 20. The National Border Patrol Council issued a statement on the hire and shared their disappointment in the move. Andy Ramirez reports on other reactions from around the Border Patrol, along with what this move means for CBP. Mark Morgan served with the FBI for 20 years, including most recently Assistant Director.
