Antifa: New Documentary by Trevor Loudon Pulls Off the Mask

New Zealander Trevor Loudon has done it again, producing an extraordinary, hard-hitting, timely documentary about a subject crucially important to America's survival.

The target of his just-released video is "Antifa," which is the name adopted by the violent mobs of masked, black-clad anarchist/communist thugs that have been rampaging throughout America for the past year. If the American media (New York Times, Huffington Post, CNN, NBC, PBS, etc.) were doing their job, Mr. Loudon's would be unnecessary. As it is, the so-called mainstream media actually have been serving as a cheering section for the Antifa gangsters, as they escalate their campaigns of hate, rioting, burning, property destruction, insurrection, and violent criminal assault.

Like Mr. Loudon's previous documentaries, his new video, America Under Siege: Antifa, is a must-see exposé, jam-packed with exclusive interviews, important video footage of Antifa violence and Loudon's own perceptive analysis. (Text continues below the video.)

Although the "Antifa" brand has come to the attention of mainstream America only in the past year or so, with its primary focus on Donald Trump (first, when he was a candidate and, now, as president), Antifa's roots, both in America and in Europe, go back decades to communist parties and terrorist organizations. While professing to be "anti-fascist," the Antifa storm troopers employ fascist/communist tactics — including death threats and physical beatings to intimidate and silence all opposition to their communist agenda. Mr. Loudon does an excellent job, in the brief time available, in providing the historical backdrop for Antifa in Russia, England, Italy, and elsewhere.

Among those whom Loudon interviews are a number of conservative/libertarian commentators who have recently gone up against Antifa mob violence: Gavin McInnes, Milo Yiannopoulos, Lauren Southern, Jack Posobiec, Steve Deace, and Lindsay Grathwohl, the daughter of the late Larry Grathwohl, who was the FBI's most important undercover operative inside the Weather Underground terrorist group during the 1970s. Mr. Grathwohl's extraordinary exploits as a top-level member of the group first gained widespread public notice with the 1982 video documentary No Place to Hide: The Strategy and Tactics of Terrorism, produced by Congressman Lawrence P. McDonald's Western Goals Foundation. In that video, Larry Grathwohl described meetings in which he sat with top Weather Underground leadership, as they discussed the necessity of executing 25 million Americans, once their planned communist regime came to power. Some of those deadly radicals — such as Bill Ayers and Bernadine Dohrn — went on to become professors at leading universities. Ayers, Dohrn, and fellow aging comrades from the Weather Underground, SDS, Black Panthers, Communist Party USA, and Revolutionary Communist Party provide the models (and in many cases the actual leadership for) the current Antifa crop of violent revolutionaries.

As a journalist, and as a researcher for Dr. McDonald and the Western Goals Foundation, during the 1970s and early 1980s, I also went undercover inside the Communist Party USA, Revolutionary Communist Party, Socialist Workers Party, Workers World Party, and the radical student organizations that were feeder groups for the organized communists. What we are witnessing today with the rise of Antifa is a recreation of the atmosphere and the network of subversive organizations similar to that of the 1960s, '70s, and '80s, that is part of an integral plan for a new phase of “the revolution.” They have literally declared war on America, as many of the Antifa banners openly, defiantly state. They intend to cause such chaos that America will become “ungovernable,” leading (they hope) to the overthrow of our constitutional system (which they say is racist and fascist) and the establishment of an anarchist-communist dictatorship.

If the politicians, media organizations, and tax-exempt foundations that are providing critical support and protection to the Antifa thugs are not exposed and stopped, the Antifa violence will continue to escalate, until they become the equivalent of Mao Zedong’s murderous Red Guards, and can carry out the same genocidal program here in America. That must not be allowed to happen.

Thanks to the Capitol Research Center, this important new video is available free for viewing online. Every American who loves this country and treasures freedom should see this video — immediately, if not sooner. And then, please help disarm the Antifa time bomb by spreading the video far and wide. And show your appreciation to our “Kiwi” friend, Trevor Loudon, a passionate defender of liberty and a true friend of America, by visiting his webpages TrevorLoudon.com and KeyWiki.com.
