

Written by Dennis Behrendt on August 17, 2008

Antiterrorism Aid to Upgrade Pakistan's Aging F-16s

Last month the Bush administration announced that it plans to use $230 million in Pakistani aid, specifically designated by Congress for law enforcement or counterterrorism, to upgrade Pakistan's aging F-16 attack planes.

"Some members of Congress have greeted the proposal with dismay and anger, and may block the move," the New York Times reported on July 24. "Lawmakers and their aides say that F-16s do not help the counterterrorism campaign and defy the administration's urgings that Pakistan increase pressure on fighters of Al Qaeda and the Taliban in its tribal areas."

Pakistan had bought about 40 F-16s by 1990, when the U.S. government ended all aid and military sales to Pakistan citing the regime's secret efforts to build nuclear weapons. That prohibition has changed since 9/11, however, and in 2006 Pakistan was allowed to purchase up to 36 new F-16C/D attack planes.

Subscribe to the New American

Get exclusive digital access to the most informative, non-partisan truthful news source for patriotic Americans!

Discover a refreshing blend of time-honored values, principles and insightful perspectives within the pages of "The New American" magazine. Delve into a world where tradition is the foundation, and exploration knows no bounds.

From politics and finance to foreign affairs, environment, culture, and technology, we bring you an unparalleled array of topics that matter most.

Subscribe

What's Included?

- 24 Issues Per Year
- Optional Print Edition
- Digital Edition Access
- Exclusive Subscriber Content
- Audio provided for all articles
- Unlimited access to past issues
- Coming Soon! Ad FREE
- 60-Day money back guarantee!
- Cancel anytime.