

Global Elites Want Mandatory COVID-19 Vaccine. Would Biden Make It a Reality?

“Getting your shots” will be more than a mere suggestion if the globalists get their way.

Mouthpieces for the establishment such as National Institute of Allergy and Infectious Diseases (NIAID) Director Anthony Fauci are making it increasingly clear that they want the vast majority of Americans to receive a COVID-19 vaccine. They’re willing to use a variety of tactics, from fear-mongering to social pressure to outright mandates, to make Americans comply.

Fauci is now offering “hope” to a world desperate for a return to normalcy: Get your shot and the pandemic will go away.

Speaking to a U.K. think tank after Pfizer Inc. and BioNTech SE reported that the vaccine they are developing is more than 90-percent effective, the NIAID chief said the coronavirus outbreak is “not going to be a pandemic for a lot longer, because I believe the vaccines are going to turn that around.”

“Vaccines will help us,” added Fauci. “What we’ve got to do is just hang on and continue to double down on the public health measures.”

Previously, however, Fauci had said that even with vaccines, life would not return to “normal” until 2022.

“If we get a vaccination campaign, and by the second or third quarter of 2021 we have vaccinated a substantial proportion of the people, I think it will be easily by the end of 2021 — and perhaps even into the next year — before we start having some semblances of normality,” said Fauci in an interview with Australia’s University of Melbourne.

Could it be that now that he believes Joe Biden will be president in January, he wants to make his anticipated new boss the savior who delivers the world from the evil virus Trump propagated?

Fauci also told the U.K. that people must resist their “independent spirit” and just “do what you’re told” if they want the virus to go away.

“Each of our countries have that independent spirit, where we don’t want to be told what to do,” he said. “Well, I understand that, but now is the time to do what you’re told.”

Claiming that he loves the federalist nature of America’s government system, he nevertheless argued that “We had too much individual approaches towards how we were going to handle the outbreak, so our baseline never came down to the low level where we wanted it to be.”

Fauci also said there would be a “core of people” who would never take a vaccine and that it would be “problematic” if up to 50 percent of the American population refused to receive it.

“I think there has been an anti-authority component to this, we had ‘anti-vax’ people don’t like to be told to be vaccinated,” he maintained. “Scientists are often perceived as authoritarian and sometimes in fact they’ve made that perception themselves by the way they act. I think we can improve on that.”

He also condemned the “herd immunity” strategy to dealing with the virus, which posits that letting those who are healthy contract COVID-19 helps the overall population develop antibodies and resistance to it.

According to Fauci, herd immunity would require a 70-percent infection rate and result in 1,715,000 deaths.

How will the powers that be convince the majority of Americans to receive the vaccine, which is pushed by globalists such as population-control advocate Bill Gates?

One way is to simply mandate it, something Joe Biden has signaled he would be open to doing if he becomes president.

USA Today notes:

During Biden’s Oct. 15 town hall in Philadelphia with ABC News, a voter asked the former vice president if he would mandate that all Americans receive a vaccine if one were approved between now and the end of the year.

In response, Biden said, “If the body of science is saying that this is what is ready to be done and they’re — it’s been tested and they’ve gone through the three phases — yes, I would take it and I’d encourage people to take it.”

He added that mandating its use would depend on what kind of positive impact it would have, and “the state of the nature of the vaccine when it comes out and how it’s being distributed.”

Biden also stated he would consider enforcing COVID-19 vaccines the way the measles vaccine is handled.

“You can’t come to school until you have a measles shot.”

Gates is supporting a partnership between Mastercard and the GAVI vaccine alliance that would integrate biometric identification technology into Mastercard’s “Wellness Pass,” a digital vaccination record and identity system. Would getting your shots be required by companies such as Mastercard in order to make financial transactions?

Ticketmaster, the American ticket sales and distribution company, has been working on a smartphone app called the SmartEvent system that verifies the vaccination and test-result status of ticket buyers within a 24- to 72-hour window.

The ticket buyer will need to verify vaccination or test negative at an approved provider approximately 24 to 72 hours before the concert. The results are then sent to a health-pass company that sends it to Ticketmaster. A QR code is then generated and sent to the app, giving the ticket buyer the credentials needed to attend the event.

Will being vaccinated be required to attend most public events?
