Math Professor Flags Nearly 100,000 Fraudulent Votes in Pennsylvania

Under penalty of perjury, Williams College Professor of Mathematics Steven J. Miller declared that up to 100,000 votes in Pennsylvania “were either requested by someone other than the registered Republican, or requested and returned but not counted.” The number of fraudulent votes or votes not counted “range from 89,397 to 98,801,” according to Miller.

He testified:

All of the facts stated herein are true and based on my personal knowledge.

I received a B.S. in Mathematics and Physics from Yale University in 1996 and a Ph.D. of Mathematics from Princeton University in 2002....

I am currently a professor of mathematics at Williams College....

I have analyzed phone bank data provided to me [from Election Data Services] regarding responses to questions relating to mail ballot requests, returns and related issues....

I can show, to a reasonable degree of professional certainty, that the conclusions as stated in this report are correct.

I declare under the penalty of perjury that the foregoing is true and correct.

This was enough for Federal Election Commission (FEC) Chairman Trey Trainor to declare “that fraud took place” on Election Day. Said Trainor:

This data, which is provided by an expert witness, who would be qualified in almost any court in the country, adds to the conclusions that some level of voter fraud took place in this year’s election.

But Miller’s conclusions are just the tip of the iceberg, said Trainor:

The rush to certify results that are this suspicious from places with known election violations would nullify millions of votes that were legally cast by individual voters.

In an interview at Newsmax on Tuesday that continues to reverberate, Sidney Powell, a lead attorney in the Trump campaign working to expose the immense voter fraud, said “I think we will find that [President Trump] had at least 80 million votes,” nearly 10 million than were officially accorded to him.

Upon reviewing what Powell had uncovered so far, high-powered attorney L. Lin Wood concluded that “this election was a fraud. Donald Trump won, I believe, clearly a 70 percent-plus landslide election.... He probably won over 400 Electoral votes.”

That was on Tuesday last week. On Friday, Powell, based upon additional information, declared on The Howie Carr Show that “We’ve got a number of smoking guns ... [so many that] we may have to get witness protection for them. We have a lot of extremely solid evidence. It’s beyond impressive, and absolutely terrifying.”

Powell went on to say that, based on information received since her Newsmax interview, she believes Joe Biden received as many as 10 million fraudulent votes, and that up to seven million were switched from Trump to Biden via the Dominion voter system. She added:

My [best] estimate at this time is roughly 7 million [stolen votes] but it might be more. We’re also getting some data that reflects that millions — not just a few hundred or a thousand — but some millions of dead people voted.

The anti-Trump mainstream media, working essentially as the communications arm of the Democratic National Committee (DNC), has excoriated Powell and her team for not being forthcoming with hard evidence to back up these claims. But Powell has promised to release such evidence this coming week.

It’ll be interesting to see how the media/DNC deals with that evidence if and when it is made public.
