Republican Senate? Biden Already Planning to Govern by Executive Order

Why bother going through Congress when you can rule by presidential decree?

Should Joe Biden prove successful in his attempt to become president in spite of the shadow of fraud that hangs over his media-called victories in swing states, he plans to use Barack Obama's style of ramming through his agenda via executive order, according to the Washington Post.

"President-elect Joe Biden is planning to quickly sign a series of executive orders after being sworn into office on Jan. 20, immediately forecasting that the country's politics have shifted and that his presidency will be guided by radically different priorities," the Post reports.

Of course, the first sentence alone contains a glaring falsehood, as Joe Biden is not president-elect of the United States, no matter how many times they repeat it. It is not the media, after all, that decides the winner of an election. No state has thus far been certified for either candidate and various recounts and lawsuits are in the works. It is the Electoral College that will decide the president-elect in December.

The Post goes on to note that the Biden team, already considering themselves the victors, believe they will have to depend on executive orders to get anything done as it appears probable that the Senate will remain in Republican hands:

Biden's top advisers have spent months quietly working on how best to implement his agenda, with hundreds of transition officials preparing to get to work inside various federal agencies. They have assembled a book filled with his campaign commitments to help guide their early decisions....

But there has also been a recognition of those around him that he may have to lean more on executive actions that he had once hoped. He can reorient various federal agencies and regulations, and he can adopt a different posture on the world stage....

"The policy team, the transition policy teams, are focusing now very much on executive power," said a Biden ally who has been in touch with his team who, like others interviewed for this story, spoke on the condition of anonymity to discuss private conversations. "I expect that to be freely used in a Biden administration at this point, if the Senate becomes a roadblock."

And to what does Biden want to devote his “phone and pen?” Top items the Democrat wants to tackle immediately are rejoining the Paris Climate Accord and the World Health Organization, repealing President Trump’s travel restrictions on terror hotspots, and reinstating DACA/the Dream Act in some form.

And that’s only the beginning. The image of Joe Biden as a moderate has always been an illusion designed to court middle-of-the-road Democrats and NeverTrump Republicans. The truth is that Biden’s platform is the most radically socialist of any major-party presidential candidate in American history.

Not only would Biden return the country to draconian lockdown policies under the guise of COVID-19 and enact totalitarian controls on businesses and individuals under the pretext of environmentalism, but his stance on guns would signal the virtual end of the 2nd Amendment.

Biden wants to repeal the 2005 Protection of Lawful Commerce in Arms Act. Doing so would make it easier for gun manufacturers to be held civilly liable for people who commit crimes with their products.

Then, he wants to disarm Americans of many semi-automatic firearms. Next, Biden wants to sign an executive order banning the importation of “assault weapons” (while simultaneously banning their sale), forcing Americans to either sell their weapons to the government under a buyback program or register them with the ATF.

And it doesn’t end there. Biden wants to give funding to states to implement “red flag” laws and create a gun confiscation task force that would go door to door taking Americans’ firearms away.

This is why it is imperative for the future of the American Republic that President Trump challenge the alleged fraud in the courts. The Constitution would not survive four years of a Biden (or Harris) presidency.

Right now, America is in the middle of an information war in which the Left and the Deep State are using the entire mainstream-media apparatus to bombard the public with propaganda claiming Biden already has the election in the bag.

Citizens who are aware of the truth must continue to spread the truth and encourage their elected officials to ensure the election is carried out with integrity.
