

Written by Alex Newman on April 19, 2022

Courts Meddling in Families Sparks Growing Alarm

https://media.blubrry.com/1462062/thenewamerican.com/assets/podcast/conversations/CTM_220419_CourtsMeddlinginFamiliesSparksGrowingAlarm.mp3

Podcast: Play in new window | Download
(Duration: 14:51 — 13.8MB)
Subscribe: Android | RSS | More

A bizarre case in Idaho where a court ordered that parents allow “toxic” grandparents to be involved in the lives of the children, despite the parents’ wishes, raises troubling concerns about parental rights and government overreach into the family, explain ParentsUSA chief David Delugas and Law Professor David Pimentel from the University of Idaho in this interview with The New American magazine’s Alex Newman for Conversations That Matter. The two experts warn that if courts can meddle here, it sets a very troubling precedent allowing government—rather than parents—to make critical decisions for children under the guise of the child’s “best interest.” The case has national implications and many states have “slippery slope” policies like these, allowing judges to second-guess parents. Newman also warns about where these ideas will go, pointing to the UN Convention on the Rights of the Child and laws passed in Europe implementing it.

Subscribe to the New American

Get exclusive digital access to the most informative, non-partisan truthful news source for patriotic Americans!

Discover a refreshing blend of time-honored values, principles and insightful perspectives within the pages of "The New American" magazine. Delve into a world where tradition is the foundation, and exploration knows no bounds.

From politics and finance to foreign affairs, environment, culture, and technology, we bring you an unparalleled array of topics that matter most.

What's Included?

- 24 Issues Per Year
- Optional Print Edition
- Digital Edition Access
- Exclusive Subscriber Content
- Audio provided for all articles
- Unlimited access to past issues
- Coming Soon! Ad FREE
- 60-Day money back guarantee!
- Cancel anytime.

Subscribe