What happens when a system designed to treat suffering actually makes it worse?

In this explosive episode of Behind The Deep State, legendary psychiatrist Dr. Peter Breggin examines the disturbing cases of Lindsay Clancy, who systematically killed her three children in Massachusetts, and others who have killed their own children—and the growing questions surrounding psychiatric drugs, postpartum isolation, and a medical system that may be treating suffering with increasingly dangerous chemical interventions.

Is modern psychiatry medicalizing normal human suffering while abandoning the family and community support mothers desperately need? And are pharmaceutical interventions sometimes contributing to the very violence, suicidality, and mental breakdowns they are supposed to prevent?

Newman and Dr. Breggin dig into the disturbing evidence and ask whether America has become too medicated.
