Revolutionary forces seeking to erase American history are going to take down the hugely significant “Reconciliation” Civil War monument and desecrate the historic grave of Jewish veteran and sculptor Moses Ezekiel in Arlington National Cemetery, unless the effort is stopped by Congress or the military, warned Ann McLean with Defend Arlington and the Virginia Council on this episode of Conversations That Matter with The New American magazine’s Alex Newman. One reason the forces of destruction are seeking to tear down the monument is that it shows black soldiers fighting for the Confederacy, which runs counter to the politically correct narrative about the Civil War. Another reason is that the far-left Southern Poverty Law Center, widely regarded as an anti-Christian hate group, has falsely tried to associate the monument with racism. McLean says Americans must act to save the monument.

“We don’t destroy history,” she said, adding that the new “woke” religion working to erase U.S. history was at odds with America’s biblical traditions and heritage.
