

Dr. Richard Urso, MD: Pandemic Over, Now in “Casedemic”

The New American’s Christian Gomez interview Dr. Richard Urso, an Ophthalmologist with America’s Frontline Doctors. Dr. Urso discusses how the COVID-19 pandemic has already peaked and that we are currently in the midst of a “casedemic,” as we are having more rapid and widespread testing. Dr. Urso also discusses how basic cloth masks and disposal surgical masks are not effective at protecting individuals from exposures to viral containment, whether in an S-4 lab or in out in society with regard to potential exposure to COVID-19. Because masks don’t work, Dr. Urso contends that mask mandates stifle people’s civil liberties and freedom of choice. Dr. Urso also expounds on the many benefits of hydroxychloroquine.
