Globalist, leftwing, and open-borders parties were hammered in the recent elections for the European “Parliament,” sparking concerns among establishment voices that those trends foreshadow similar developments in the United States, explains The New American magazine’s Alex Newman in this episode of Behind The Deep State. France saw globalist and pro-mass migration parties especially devastated, setting up a potential dramatic shift in French politics that will reverberate across the European Union. However, the establishment media is spinning several phony narratives about the election. And the background of the EU, which is the globalist model for the world, has remained largely hidden. Alex breaks it down here.
