Despite state laws and President Trump's executive orders, Arizona State University is continuing to push anti-white, anti-Christian programs promoting cultural Marxism under the guise of "Diversity, Equity, and Inclusion," but at least one Christian professor, Professor Owen Anderson, is taking on the Sun Devils in a David v. Goliath-style legal battle.

Speaking on Conversations That Matter to The New American Senior Editor Alex Newman, Professor Anderson says liberalism and leftism are so deeply embedded there that many professors—like fish in water not realizing they are wet—don't even see it. And yet, it is ubiquitous, with surveys showing less than 20 professors out of thousands admitting to voting Republican.

Professor Anderson, who is also a pastor, believes universities in America are at a turning point. They are going to lose catastrophic numbers of students, for a variety of reasons. Many will go out of business soon, he said. And while higher learning leaders were hoping to fill the ranks with foreign students, that avenue is likely to be cut off too. From the indoctrination to the decline in births, the system is facing catastrophe.

There is much more from Professor Anderson in this explosive interview, including discussion on how university professors can and should deal with transcendent, biblical truths.
