As more information comes out about the devastating effects of the Covid injections, more and more people around the world are seeking to find unvaxxed blood for transfusions. Now there is an option. Dr. Clinton Ohlers, vice president of Safe Blood, joined Alex Newman on Conversations That Matter for The New American to discuss how his organization is helping match unvaxxed donors with those in need.

The effort began when scientists and medical professionals began examining vaxxed blood under a microscope. “They saw in every case they looked at, the vaxxed blood was affected,” Ohlers said.

The predictions that there would be health problems with those who receive donations of vaxxed blood were correct, he added. Among other examples, Dr. Ohlers cited multiple babies who received blood transfusions from vaxxed donors and then died from myocarditis and other issues related to contaminated blood.

To meet the growing demand for pure blood, Safe Blood is now working across the United States and internationally to pair blood transfusion recipients in need with unvaxxed donors whose blood has not been contaminated with the mRNA injections. Now, Big Pharma is fighting back. But the demand keeps growing.
