Commissioners in Lake County, Florida, adopted a “Bill of Rights” ordinance protecting the God-given, constitutionally protected rights of citizens from unconstitutional mandates, statutes, or decrees from Tallahassee or D.C., explained Commissioner Anthony Sabatini in this interview on Conversations That Matter with The New American magazine’s Alex Newman.

Sabatini, who previously served in the state legislature working to protect Floridians from federal power grabs, explained that measure would ensure that county government interposes between citizens and illegal acts by state or federal authorities. The sheriff is supportive, and the ordinance enjoys broad support, he said.

Lake County is just the latest jurisdiction in the Sunshine State to pass tough new measures protecting the rights of constituents. In the wake of abusive and unconstitutional tyranny imposed during Covid, other counties in Florida have passed similar measures in recent years. Sabatini said this was important, as the 2028 election could bring another totalitarian Democrat to power.
