State legislatures can move faster than Congress can, and now is the time for all states to create and strengthen their Freedom Caucuses to protect individual liberties, explains Louisiana State Representative Beryl Amedee to Alex Newman on Conversations That Matter for The New American.

Freedom Caucuses are coalitions of legislators who are committed to limited government, the U.S. Constitution, and safeguarding liberty. Currently, only thirteen states have Freedom Caucuses. This network must expand to all 50 states.

Now more than ever, states must reclaim their sovereignty from Deep State forces in Washington, D.C., and globalists abroad. Establishing Freedom Caucuses is a significant step to that end.
