Rally to Defend Private Property Rights Against Biden-backed Carbon Capture

The MidWest Coalition to Protect Private Property Rights is hosting a rally to expose the hazardous carbon capture pipelines planned throughout the nation's Corn Belt. On Saturday, July 8 from 10 a.m. until 3 p.m., Great Plains farmers and landowners rally in Fort Dodge, Iowa, to protest the use of eminent domain by for-profit companies who plan to install thousands of miles of this dangerous pipeline. They are backed by billions of taxpayer dollars, courtesy of the Biden Administration.

Speakers at the event are Congressman Steve King, national radio host Trent Loos, Iowa state representative Mark Thompson, and various attorneys, landowners and farmers. The New American is live-streaming the event.
