"It is incomprehensible how a vibrant and healthy 28-year-old could enter the hospital with normal vital signs, only to tragically leave in a body bag, her organs irreparably damaged." So says the mother of Danielle Alvarez, who passed away tragically in 2021 at a Covid hospital in New York.

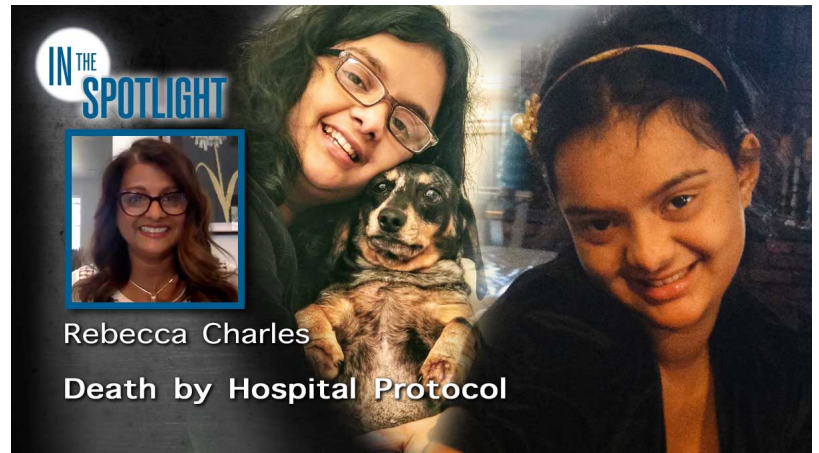

Rebecca Charles has now made it her mission to "unmask the truth behind deadly hospital protocols."

"I want to put an end to this injustice," she tells The New American. "By sharing Danielle's story, I aim to unveil the realities of profit-driven practices, ensuring her memory serves as a catalyst for positive change."

Charles talks with The New American senior editor Rebecca Terrell about her mission and her website, DeathByHospitalProtocol.com, where she is collecting stories from others who have also lost loved ones. Together, they are compiling the names of hospitals and healthcare workers nationwide, who have been involved in their cases. They hope to make the information public so others can avoid the same fate.
