There's a tenuous truce in Gaza, and a few of the more than 200 hostages seized by Hamas terrorists back on October 7 have been released. But is releasing Palestinian prisoners for hostages a good idea?

Also, the discovery of a Communist Chinese-linked biolab on American soil highlights the fact that America is vulnerable to pathogenic risk; former police officer Derek Chauvin was stabbed by another inmate at a federal prison, shortly after a blockbuster documentary came out debunking the establishment narrative about his case; and Venezuela is going to hold a nationwide referendum in support of its claim that most of the neighboring country of Guyana belongs to Venezuela.
