The New American's Steve Bonta interviews internationally recognized China expert Steven Mosher about U.S.-China relations. Back in 1979, Mosher was the first American social scientist to visit the communist mainland. As a result of his visit, he was able to expose China's policy of forced abortions, and for his efforts incurred the wrath of the regime. He is the author of a number of important books on China including A Mother's Ordeal: One Woman's Fight Against China's One-Child Policy, Hegemon: China's Plan to Dominate Asia and the World, and Broken Earth: The Rural Chinese. He is also president of the Population Research Institute, which is anti-abortion and anti-population control. During a time when U.S.-China relations are becoming increasingly antagonistic, Mosher's knowledge and insights are particularly valuable.
