If next year's presidential election were held today, Donald Trump would resoundingly defeat Joe Biden. That's according to a new ABC News-Washington Post poll of more than 1,000 adults. According to the poll, Trump leads Biden by an astounding 51 percent to 42 percent. Two major issues driving these numbers are the border crisis and the economy.

In other stories, New York Governor Kathy Hochul called in more National Guardsmen to help with the massive surge of illegal immigrants, just in time for them to welcome the three busloads of migrants Texas sent on Friday; a family who came here legally is pleading with the Biden administration not to deport them back to Germany, which they left because it was illegal to homeschool their children; obstacles for carbon-capture pipelines keep piling up in North Dakota; and a federal judge in California just ruled that an anti-Second Amendment law is unconstitutional.

In the second half of the show, host Paul Dragu and CEO emeritus of The John Birch Society Art Thompson discuss how America's Founding Fathers organized for independence based on God's laws, and Christian Gomez and Selwyn Duke talk about why toppling statues of historical figures the Woke Cartel hates matters.
