San Francisco rolled out the red carpet yesterday for Chinese dictator Xi Jinping, who came to America to attend the APEC meeting of Pacific nations and meet with Joe Biden. Biden and Xi reportedly discussed issues ranging from America’s fentanyl crisis — which is supported by the Chinese government — to growing military confrontations around Taiwan and in the South China Sea. The New American’s Steve Bonta breaks down the likely reason the United States works hard to keep relations with China on friendly terms.

Other stories include:

@ 10:50 | Louisiana’s Republican Representative Clay Higgins says the FBI brought in busloads of informants to the Capitol on January 6 and tells FBI Director Christopher Wray that “Your day is coming.”

@ 23:35 | Nebraska takes a major step toward implementing digital IDs.

@ 33:20 | Wisconsin State Assemblyman Ty Boddien discusses how you can use The New American’s Congressional Scorecards to hold lawmakers accountable to the Constitution.
