A federal judge has ruled that Google is a monopoly. The tech giant conducts 90 percent of the searches around the world, a dominance it cemented by illegal means. The court ruling has been welcomed across the board, but major media aren't talking about how Google became such a behemoth. The New American Daily makes the case that government intervention is responsible for Google's monopoly.

Also in this episode:

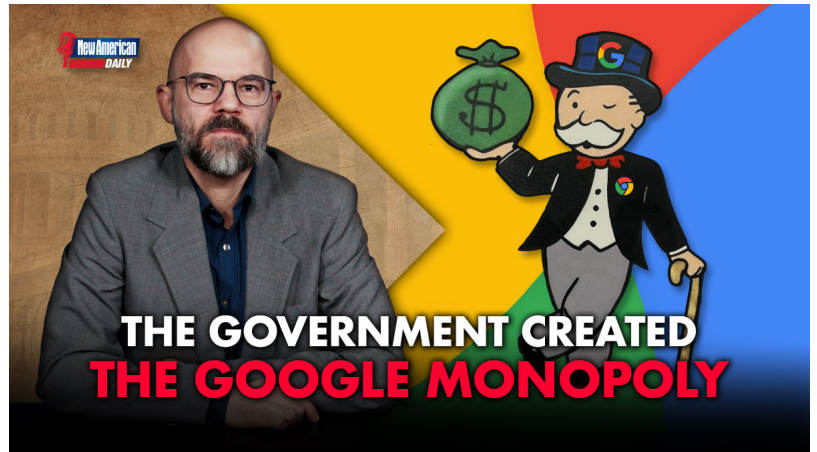

The FBI foiled an assassination attempt sources say targeted Donald Trump;

Georgia Republicans and Democrats agree it's time to return to return to paper ballots in elections.
