Wisconsin voters just passed amendments to the state’s constitution banning private money and non-election officials from the administration of elections. The amendments were partially in response to the infusion of “Zuckerbucks” and influence of political operatives in the state’s 2020 elections. Meanwhile, in Georgia — another state many say is fraught with election problems — a former election official testified to a series of errors that plagued that state’s 2020 election.

Also in this episode:

@ 11:04 | Seattle public schools shuttered a gifted-student program because it had too many white and Asian students.

@ 21:48 | A $42 million gun buyback program in Canada has yielded zero guns, a total embarrassment to Trudeau’s statist government.

@ 26:21 | Argentina is experiencing a turnaround, thanks to the leadership of a sane, libertarian president. Does this mean there’s hope America can learn from this?
