Washington state Governor Jay Inslee signed a trio of anti-gun bills yesterday, one of which immediately bans “assault weapons,” and President Joe Biden met with the “Tennessee Three” to discuss how government can more efficiently restrict gun rights. Meanwhile, Texas school districts continue hiring armed private marshals to protect schools.

Also, tech entrepreneur Peter Thiel has been collaborating with the CIA and other government agencies to create technology that surveils the public — investigative journalist William F. Jasper discusses this critical story.

And in the second part of the show, Rebecca Terrell interviews Republican U.S. Representative Andrew Clyde of Georgia about his work in Congress, and Robert Owens discusses jury nullification.
